GUARD ALLSTON CHILDREN

Extraordinary precautions were taken today to protect the two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Longfellow, 2d, of No. 3 Commonwealth terrace, Allston, from death or kidnaping at the hands of blackmailers who have made three insistent demands for $10,000 under threat of harm to the little ones.

Bomb threats have been made by the blackmailers.

The children, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, 3d, and Earl Longfellow, are relatives in the fourth generation of the poet Longfellow.

The precautions taken today to protect the little fellows were these:

MAID GUARDS CHILDREN.

The father, already having notified the police, invoked federal aid by calling the attention of the Boston postoffice authorities to the blackmailing letters.

A maid was detailed to watch the children constantly. She accompanies them to and from school, is with them while they play and guards them at night.

A construction foreman who formerly worked for Mr. Longfellow on building jobs was engaged to guard the Longfellow home. This foreman is installed in a vacant house next to the Longfellows. The heat has been turned on and other arrangements made for the foreman's comfort. Mr. Longfellow suspects that some discharged employe is back of the letter threats. This foreman knows practically all the Longfellow employes, past and present, by sight. From his lookout in the vacant house he can see all approaches to the Longfellow home. He stands guard at night and most of the day.

GRAVE IN FACE OF THREATS.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, 3d., the elder of the lads, is keenly interested in all these defences. With boyish courage he looks on it all as great fun. He is eight years old.

Earl, the six-year-old, seems a bit serious about it. This talk of kidnapers strikes him apparently as bad business.

Mrs. Longfellow is as brave about it as a woman could be who is confronted with the bare suggestion of harm to her boys.

"I don't want the children out of my sight," she admitted today. "I even feel uneasy about them when they are in the care of the maid. My husband assures me that there is no real cause to worry, that those kind of things are not done nowadays, but——"

The mother's uncompleted sentence showed the thought that lay back in her mind of hating the whole unpleasant business.

Mr. Longfellow thinks that some discharged employe wrote the three letters, either to scare the family or with mercenary intentions, or both.

GIVE LETTERS TO POLICE.

The letters, which have been turned over to the police, say that unless the money is left beneath a stone in

HOUSE IS WRECKED BY SNOW

Under the tons of snow piled upon it by the storms of the last two days, the roof of the big garage at Nos. 1509-1513 Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan, collapsed early today.

The roof carried with it a side wall, and falling debris cut away the lower part of the three-apartment house at No. 1515 Blue Hill avenue.

The garage was being prepared for occupancy, and a workman is believed to have been buried under the debris. A coat and dinner pail were found by the people who rushed up at the crash of falling bricks. Firemen and policemen are at work clearing away the debris and hunting for the man's body.

In a bedroom in the apartment house at No. 1515, Kelly Covett, a two-year-old daughter of Nicholas Covett, was sleeping. The roof carried with it part of the garage wall overhanging her room, and flying bricks burst in the wall and window next where she was sleeping.

At the first crash, the child ducked under the bedclothes and escaped serious injury. When her parents rushed in, they found her bed covered with plaster and broken glass, but the girl was unhurt.

District Fire Chief Maurice Heffernan, who had responded to an alarm sent in as soon as the collapse occurred, at once ordered this tenement vacted. The Covetts occupy the first floor, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Stuart and family are on the third floor. Chief Heffernan feared more of the wall might fall, and carry with it the supporting structure of the apartment house.

Immediately after the collapse a big squad of police roped off the street in front of the garage to protect traffic. Work started on removing the debris.

The garage was built about a year ago, occupied for a short time and has since been vacant. It was soon to be reopened. The owner is William I. Estabrook of No. 1519 Blue Hill avenue.

Perry Belmonts in Path of Bobsled

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Feb. 17.—A bobsled, the steering gear of which got out of order, shot over a bank yesterday while going at a terrific pace at a point known as Hanky Corner.

It drove into a crowd of spectators, and Mrs. Swift Fernald of Chicago was badly cut about the head and neck and several others were injured. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont had a narrow escape from being run down.

Woman on Bridge Killed by Train

SUNCOOK, N. H., Feb. 17.—The newspaper train, nearly an hour late, struck and killed Mrs. Joseph Thomas, aged fifty-five, on the bridge over the Suncook River at Pembroke this morning. Mrs. Thomas was making a short cut to her work in the China mill. She is survived by her husband and a married daughter.

Steamer Kathlamba Damaged by Storms

STATE TO KEEP GRIP ON B. & M.

The Boston & Maine Railroad situation in Massachusetts occupied much of the attention of the Attorney-General's department today, according to dispatches from Washington, with Governor Walsh maintaining a determined fight to preserve in the Bay State the right to acquire control of the railroad if it sees fit for the protection of its stockholders.

The immediate issue under consideration was the selection of the board of trustees for the reorganization of the Boston & Maine.

Governor Walsh again urged Louis D. Brandeis, who is with him in Washington, to be one of the trustees, but for a second time Mr. Brandeis refused the Governor's request.

Conferences among representatives of the State and of the railroad today failed.

The Governor first held a conference with Mr. Brandeis. Then he discussed possible trustees with George W. Anderson of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission.

INSISTS ON CONTROL.

Governor Walsh stated that he did not want anything written into the agreement which the government proposed to make with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, that would prevent the State of Massachusetts from acquiring the control of the Boston Railroad company, which controls a majority of the Boston & Maine stock.

The Governor expressed himself as not satisfied that the appointment of trustees for the Boston & Maine would prevent a receivership. He declared he have the stockholders protected by the clause which enables the State of Massachusetts to take over the stock upon a service of one year's notice.

While the government was conferring with Brandeis, Chairman Howard Elliott of the New Haven road and the attorneys for Bond Stock and Walker D. Hines at the Shoreham Hotel. These protected the list of Boston & Maine trustees to be presented to the Attorney-General of Massachusetts. Later Elliott left the department together with Governor Walsh and Commissioner Anderson, and formally submitted their selection to Assistant Attorneys-General Atkins and Sheperd.

SUGGESTS NAMES.

Mr. Brandeis suggested men whom he felt would be competent to rehabilitate the road and the Governor included those men on his list. Chairman Elliott declared he was favorable to but three trustees.

Fire Chief Dies as Alarm Sounds

District Fire Chief David J. Nyhan of the Atlantic station in Quincy, who has been ill for several weeks, was reported dead just as word to answer the alarm. Chief Nyhan was two days ago. He was 70 years old. He was born in Boston and was appointed to the Quincy force in 1873. He was promoted to the district chief's office in 1888. He was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and was also interested in the Catholic Temperance Union. He was fifty-three years old.

Chelsea Icicle Rings Alarm; Calls Police

An icicle, short-circuiting the burglar alarm in the Chelsea Savings Bank early today, called a squad of police to the bank and aroused the neighborhood.

EIGHT ARE RESCUED BY BUOY

Captain Giuseppe Gavi was washed overboard and drowned and four sailors were frozen to death in the rigging in the wreck of the Boston-bound bark Caslagne at Calhoon's Hollow, Provincetown, from which the eight remaining sailors were rescued early today. Lifesavers using the breeches buoy managed to get the eight survivors ashore, but all are frost-bitten and two so seriously that they are in a critical condition.

The name of the wrecked bark was not learned in Boston until this noon. The Caslagne hails from Genoa and was bound from Savona, Italy, for Boston Harbor with a cargo of gasoline which was to be laid down at the Bradley Fertilizer wharf at Weymouth. The vessel was owned by Carzolo Brothers of Genoa and had been standing off Cape Cod for a week trying to beat her way through the Dardanelles. It was caught in the last blow and was driven on the Cape Cod shore between the lifesaving stations at Calhoon's Hollow and Pamet River.

It was reported that the captain had obeyed well and rule of the sea and ended his life by jumping overboard, but advices from the survivors showed that he was washed overboard.

The Caslagne was a steel, double-decked vessel of 845 tons and was built in 1902. It was formerly the Bertha Rickmers.

The wreck is one far from Wellfleet, to the direction of Truro, where the bones of many other vessels lie buried in drifting Cape Cod sands.

A New and Necessary Market for Motor Cars

Stop and think for a moment, and you will understand how logical it is that so many buying opportunities in motor cars are listed in the American's "Want Ad" columns day after day.

Consider, for example, the incoming output of 1914 automobiles. The cars they replace must find new owners—and necessarily at a great reduction from their original price. Yet the majority of them haven't rendered a fraction of their full service.

So the American's "Want Ad" column headed "Used Cars and Accessories" provides a new and necessary market for motor cars—and a market which is constantly rich in choice offerings.

To find the make and model of car you want, at the price you want to pay, is simply a matter of keeping a close and constant watch on these columns. Or you can write a "Want Ad" of your own which will help to do your searching for you. When it is ready, leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" stations, the branch office at 264 Washington street, Main office, 80 Summer street, or

Telephone it to the Boston American Main 5180

ASKED THEM TO POSE IN NUDE, SAY GIRLS AT TRIAL OF RIDER

Several girls testified today at the trial of Henry Orne Rider on charges of having and distributing obscene pictures that they had posed for Mr. Rider—sometimes draped and sometimes partially undraped.

Rider was arrested February 1, after a Waltham man had filed a $10,000 civil suit against him charging that Rider had taken and distributed photographs of his daughter, Jessie.

The trial opened yesterday. The charges are based on eighteen photographs, seized by the police. Yesterday Helen Z. Graham testified that she had posed nude, and identified three photographs of herself in these poses.

Ruth McKay, a girl of sixteen, pretty and well dressed, was the first witness today. She said she lived at No. 42 Harris road, West Newton, and under questions by B. B. Johnson testified as follows:

ALWAYS DRAPED.

Q—When were you last in Rider's studio? A—December 23.

Q—Did you pose for him? A—Yes, I posed at various times.

Q—Did you pose draped or undraped? A—Always draped.

Q—Did he ask you to pose often? A—Several times.

Q—Did you ever see other girls at the studio? A—Yes, Ethel MacDonald and Helen Graham.

Q—Did he ever ask you to pose nude? A—Yes, but I declined.

Q—Where was this? A—In his studio, where else?

Q—Did you ever see any nude pictures of other girls? A—Yes, several.

Q—Were you alone when he asked them to pose? A—Yes.

She was cross-examined by Joseph C. Wright, representing Mr. Rider.

Q—Did you ever work for Mr. Rider? A—Yes, I worked for him six or seven weeks, about two years ago.

Q—What did you do? A—Retouched negatives.

Q—Was there ever any ungentlemanly conduct on Rider's part to-ward yourself? A—No; he was always a perfect gentleman.

Q—Did he ever insist that you pose undraped? A—No.

She was shown a photograph and asked if it brought anything to her mind. She said it did not. She was then shown another photograph of a woman partially draped. She was asked:

USED THEM FOR SKETCHES.

Q—Did you ever pose like that? A—No.

Q—Did you ever pose with so little drapery as that? A—Oh, yes, with a little less.

Q—What was Rider's method of retouching pictures of undraped models? A—He used them as a foundation, making sketches from them and then painting from the sketches.

Q—Are the pictures unchanged when he gets through with them? A—No, you wouldn't know the pictures had been taken undraped when he finishes.

Q—Was Mr. Rider an artist or a photographer? A—I understood he was both.

Q—Did you ever see any sketches of undraped girls? A—Yes, I saw them in various stages of completion.

Q—Where were these pictures kept? A—In a cabinet.

Ethel B. MacDonald, a nineteen-year-old girl, who lives at No. 302 Chestnut street, Waltham, was called. She was questioned thus:

PARTIALLY DRAPED.

Q—Are you employed by Rider now? A—Yes, since last October.

Q—Why did you first go to his studio? A—I went with Miss Quinn.

Q—Have you posed for him? A—Yes, last August and once or twice since.

Q—Did you ever pose nude? A—No, not absolutely.

Q—To what extent were you nude? A—I was partially draped.

Q—How many times did you do this? A—Twice.

Q—At his request? A—Yes.

Q—Are the photographs of pictures there now? A—I don't know.

Q—Did you ever see any other girls there? A—Yes, Helen Graham, Miss Quinn and Miss Kay.

Q—Were you there when Miss Graha imposed undraped? A—Yes.

Q—Had you posed before? A—Yes.

Q—Did you see the pictures of Miss Graham? A—Yes; I took the proofs of them.

Q—What use did he say he was going to make of your pictures? A—He said he was going to sell them later, for calendars.

Q—Did you pose again? A—I did not.

Q—Did he promise you anything? A—I was paid for my work.

She was cross-examined.

IN DANCING POSE.

Q—After the first time you met Rider, when did you next see him? A—He asked him to take pictures of me in dancing poses and he made an appointment.

She was shown a photograph of a woman partially clad and was asked: Did you ever pose in that position? A—I was asked to pose in drapery.

Q—Was there anyone else in the room when you posed? A—No, only Mr. Rider.

Q—Was Rider there all the time? A—No; he went out while I was getting ready and afterward.

Q—How little drapery did you ever pose in when you posed? A—There was just a partial drapery on one side.

Q—Was this drapery transparent? A—Oh, no.

WOMAN, ILL, DIES IN FIRE AT HYDE PARK

Mrs. Thomas Long was desperately ill in her home at No. 39 Business street, Hyde Park, when fire broke out in the basement of the house early today.

It was dangerous to attempt to move her. She was a large woman, weighing close to 300 pounds. Her husband and four firemen at length succeeded in getting her through the window and down a ladder, but she was fatally burned and died at the Hyde Park General Hospital.

The rescue was one of the most spectacular in the records of the Boston department, and was literally a hand-to-hand fight with the fire for the victim it had claimed. When the firemen arrived someone told them the woman was in her bed. Daniel Buckley, driver of Engine 48, made his way through the smoke into the house and up stairs. He found Long desperately attempting to help the sick woman from her bed, while the very bed clothing itself was breaking into flame.

FOUR FIGHT FLAMES.

Buckley lent a hand, and between them, the husband and the fireman got the woman to the window. Other firemen meanwhile had raised a ladder to the window. It was feared one ladder would not support the woman's weight. And while Buckley fought off the fire that was creeping toward the little group at the window, and while the three of them crouched and choked in the smoke, another ladder was raised and rested on the first.

Then Charles Rodd, John Hackett and John J. Smith came up the ladder. Long and Buckley managed to pass the woman through the window into their arms. She was by now unconscious from her sufferings, and from the smoke she had inhaled. She was carefully lowered to the ground and taken to the hospital, where she died.

Mrs. Long's body and arms burned by his attempts to rescue his wife, was likewise taken to the hospital.

There, an hours later, the woman died. At noon today, Long had not been told that his sacrifice had failed to save his wife's life.

GIRL HURT BY JUMPING.

When the fire was discovered, Sarah Long, a twenty-year-old niece of Mr. Long, jumped into a snow drift, from the roof of an ell. She sprained both ankles, and her feet were frost-bitten.

The building is occupied on the ground floor by Myer Rosenberg. There is a grocery store in the front, and Rosenberg and his family live in the rear. The Rosenbergs escaped without difficulty.

Buckley, the fireman who helped lift the woman from her blazing bed, escaped with slight burns, but suffered from the effects of the smoke.

The whole city was swept by dangerous fires last night, and the firemen were kept busy. There were three alarms for a fire at No. 444 Mountain avenue, Revere. Thomas E. Chase, his wife, two daughters and a son, were driven to the street. The high wind threatened the surrounding buildings. The house stands on the top of a hill, and the apparatus had to plow through drifts so that only one line of hose could at first be brought to bear.

FIRE HOUSES 50.

In a fire at No. 16 Morton street, North End, the occupants had narrow escapes. More than fifty persons were asleep in the house when the fire was discovered, and only quick work by police and firemen brought them all to the street by way of the stairs and fire escapes.

Sergeant Cornelius Donovan discovered the fire and led the work of waking the occupants. The police had to hold back the fleeing occupants to prevent a fatal stampede.

GUARD HOME OF LONGFELLOWS IN BOMB THREAT

the lot at the corner of Warren and Allston streets Mr. Longfellow and his wife will be killed, a bomb placed beneath their house, or their two children will be kidnaped, or all events will take place.

A box filled with washers was put under the rock Saturday night, but no one appeared to claim it. Mrs. Longfellow has for some time been in ill health and the letters have almost prostrated her.

The first letter, which was addressed to Mrs. Longfellow, was received on Monday, February 9. She concealed the fact from her husband. Last Wednesday a second letter came, addressed to Mr. Longfellow. Not aware that his wife had received a similar letter, he kept this a secret from her. On Saturday, when the third letter came, addressed to Mr. Longfellow, the husband and wife compared notes and then called in the police.

"If the man were serious in his determination to secure money he would not leave a letter at my door calling for $10,000, for he would know that I couldn't raise that amount in a long time," said Mr. Longfellow today. "He would have sent the letter to a Vanderbilt or a Carnegie and not to a struggling builder."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remarks a well-known authority, because sage darkens every bit of dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the sage Tea with Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a bottle, at any drug store, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." This avoiding a lot of muss.

While sage darkens faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

beach and are sweeping mountain high over the park, the life-savers are unable to reach the vessel, but an attempt to get to her in the boats will be made as soon as the tide recedes.

The beach patrol saw the distressed bark being driven in toward the beach, and she had hardly struck when the crews of both life-saving stations were rushing to her assistance.

When they arrived opposite the wreck it was found that it would be impossible to get out to the vessel in boats, and the line guns were hauled into position and a rope fired to the men on board. Above the thundering surf and ragged rocks one man after another was brought ashore in the breeches buoy until only four men remained behind, frozen in the rigging.

The revenue cutter Tuscarora is steaming at full speed for the scene of the wreck, but is being held back by the heavy seas.

POLICE NIP RIOT ON SNOW WORK IN SOMERVILLE

An incipient riot between striking and non-striking snow shovelers of the Boston Elevated in Gilman square, Somerville, today was stopped by a hurry-up squad of police before it really started.

The Elevated had sixty men shoveling yesterday at $2 a day. Today the foreman announced: "A dollar and seventy-five today, boys, but you get your dinner thrown in."

Half the workmen quit work, muttering that they wanted the extra quarter and not the dinner. The others began shoveling.

The strikers muttered some more, waved their shovels and broke out into threats. About this time somebody telephoned Police Chief Kendall that a riot was ripening fast in Gilman square.

The police auto with a dozen patrolmen made the trip quickly, and at the sight of the bluecoats the strikers became quiet. Half the strikers even resumed work, making about forty-five taking the new rate and fifteen who went away.

JUDGE DEFINES THE GORE CASE FOR THE JURY

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 17.—The taking of testimony in the case of Mrs. Minnie F. Bond against United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, for $50,000 damages for alleged assault is completed. Neither the plaintiff nor the defnce placed any more rebuttal witnesses on the stand today.

Judge Clark, in giving his instructions to the jury, said:

"The burden is upon the plaintiff to prove the truth of her assertion as cause for action in this case by the character of her evidence and not the preponderance of it.

"A conspiracy is a combination of two or more persons to accomplish an unlawful purpose. It can be proved by direct or circumstantial evidence. Testimony as to the plaintiffs good character does not tend to a justification or defence, but can be weighed in considering the plaintiff's credibility as a witness.

"The yaw presumes the plaintiff to be a woman of good character unless it is proved to the contrary.

"If you think the defendant did forcibly seize the plaintiff or lay his hands upon her, but she did not repel him, then you should find for the plaintiff.

"This is an action whereby the plaintiff claims she was assaulted by the defendant and by reason of that assault the plaintiff has suffered shame and humiliation, her nervous system was wrecked and her reputation and good name destroyed, and she has been exposed to public shame and ridicule.

"The defendant denies all of the material allegations.

"The defendant says that this suit is a step in an alleged conspiracy to compel him to favor certain persons for political preferment or accomplish his defeat for re-election to office.

Attorney F. J. Geddings then began his argument. Two hours and a half hours was allowed to each side for argument, which means that the case will not go to the jury today.

INSTRUCTOR IN ROMANCE AT CONSERVATORY

It became known today through friends of Miss Lucille Fox, former telephone operator at the New England Conservatory of Music, that Instructor Archibald MacLeod Gardner and Miss Fox were married on February 8 by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church.

Instructor Gardner is thirty-three years old, and has been married before, his first wife being divorced. Miss Fox, now Mrs. Gardner No. 2, is twenty-four years old and hails from Nova Scotia.

Their romance began with the coming of Miss Fox to the telephone desk of the Conservatory, where her quiet voice won the musical ear of the professor.

Mr. Gardner has been associated with the Conservatory of Music for ten years, both as pupil and instructor. Miss Fox came to the telephone desk two years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner have gone to housekeeping in an apartment at No. 5 Irvington street, a block away from Mr. Gardner's studio at No. 19 Garrison street.

Simple Services for Father Brett

In accordance with the simple custom of the Jesuit order, a low mass of requiem was offered today at the Church of the Immaculate Conception for the soul of the Rev. William P. Brett, S. J., who died on Sunday at Carney Hospital. The Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., rector of the church and president of Boston College, celebrated the mass. Cardinal O'Connell pronounced the final absolution. Interment was in the cemetery of Holy Cross College, Worcester.

Miss Arlin's Uncle Dies at Colebrook

COLEBROOK, N. H., Feb. 17.—Henry H. Gould, uncle of the missing Mertie Eleanor Arlin of Brookline, Mass., and a contributor to the reward offered for her recovery, is dead today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Grace Beecher. He was seventy-three years old and had been ill for about two weeks.

MIDNIGHT AUTO RAID FINDS 24 AT COCK FIGHT

In a midnight raid by automobile, incited by an anonymous letter, the Marblehead police last night rounded up twenty-one men and thirty-eight cocks at a cock fight staged in the old Sparrak barn near Red Pond, Marblehead.

The men gave names. "I don't know whether they were their own or not," the Marblehead police admitted. And after an hour in the police station they were bailed in $50 apiece by Gardner Kimball of Marblehead.

In court today they were fined $5 apiece, paid and departed.

The raid was a spectacular surprise. The police received an anonymous letter which said that the cock fight was planned. They laid plans without much noise; and when the automobiles swept up to the old barn, the spectators were completely surprised.

There was a wild break for the open air. The police halted most of the men, but three escaped in the darkness.

The thirty-eight cocks with their fighting spurs were carried to the police station in suit cases; and it is expected they will be condemned to death under the law, and killed.

500 TELL OF SEA RESCUE BY WIRELESS

Details of an accident which imperilled the lives of 495 persons became known today when the Fabre line steamer Roma came into port at Providence, after striking on one of the rock ledges of No Man's Land to the south of Martha's Vineyard.

The Roma struck on the southerly side of the bleak island at the western entrance to the Vineyard Sound during a blinding blizzard by a mile-a-minute gale.

Despite poor working conditions her position were picked up at the Newport naval station. Undoubtedly the quick working of the wireless saved a great loss of life, for the revenue cutters Acushnet and Gresham at New Bedford and Providence, respectively were immediately rushed to the Roma's assistance.

The Itasca was sent out from Newport, and a little later the tug Tampa left New London, Ct.

The first message telling of the grounding was received in French, and was not translated until several minutes after its receipt. It read:

"Ashore south side No Man's Land. Send powerful towboat with wireless operating material. Impossible for us to get off under our own power."

A second message from the Roma announced that she was pounding heavily. Later messages told of a more encouraging nature.

Apparently the Roma was a full twenty miles off her course, which lies along what is known as the "twenty-fathom curve."

Watertown Woman's $13,000 to Charities

The will of Catherine E. Galvin, late of Watertown, filed today at East Cambridge, shows an estate of $13,000. She left $1,000 to the pastor of St. Patrick's Church for religious purposes and the remaining $12,000 willed equally between the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, the House of the Good Shepherd, Sisters of Charity, Carney Hospital, Little Sisters of the Poor and the Society for the Propagation of the Faith of Boston.

'Hopeless for Unions to Expect Justice'

"Very few of our laws represent the real will or sympathy of the people. They do not give the poor man a square deal. When it comes to the labor unions it is hopeless to expect justice."

This was the pith of an address at the Boston School of Social Sciences by Meyer London, attorney for thirty-five of the New York trade unions. His train from New York was late and his audience was obliged to wait two hours for him to appear.

HAIR STOPS FALLING, DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS—25-CENT DANDERINE

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and delightful—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any first-class store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—That pearls are falling in value was shown at a jewel sale today, when a seven-strand necklace, containing 403 pearls, weighing 3,650 grains, sold for $116,000, which is $14,000 less than the expert valuation.

KUHN, LOEB CO. IN $30,000,000 W. U. DIVORCE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have practically concluded negotiations to underwrite the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's holdings of $30,000,000 of Western Union Telegraph Company shares. A formal announcement is expected in a few days.

This is the first important step taken by the American Telephone company to divorce itself from the Western Union, according to the compromise reached with the Department of Justice.

The segregation plan calls for an offering of the Western Union stock to the minority shareholders of the latter company at a price said to be about 62. Rumor had it that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. would underwrite the stock at 61. This, however, could not be officially confirmed.

Western Union stock, in anticipation of the underwriting agreement, advanced 2½ points, to 66¾. It is confidently believed that the sale will be a big success.

President Vail of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, told the AMERICAN last night that the disposal of the Western Union holdings would leave the American Company in better condition than ever.

"The present plan," he said, "met with the approval of the Department of Justice.

"We are glad the Western Union stock is going into good hands. Further developments, of course, depend upon the people in the Western Union. We are perfectly satisfied with the turn things have taken."

The costume dance which Mr. and Mrs. Bryce J. Allan are giving tonight at their home on Beacon street will be a small affair for the younger set.

ACCUSE HOLDUP MEN ON GIRL'S DESCRIPTION

Miss Annie Heirty was a centre of interest in South Boston District Court today as the girl whose quick report to the police and good powers of description resulted in the arrest of two young men soon after she had been held up on West Ninth street, South Boston, and robbed of a mesh-bag representing $12.50 in cash and property.

Albert Leary, twenty years, of No. 12 Gates street, and Frank Sheehan, also twenty, of No. 45 Gates street, South Boston, who were identified, the police say, by the girl after their arrest, pleaded not guilty today and were held until Saturday in $500 each on charges of robbery.

Miss Heirty is nineteen years old and lives at No. 189 West Ninth street. She is employed as a collector by the Elevated. On her way home at night she was approached from behind by two youths. One seized her by the arm and the other clutched her mesh-bag. Then soon ran.

WOMAN DENIES ASSAULT OVER USE OF 'PHONE

How a hall telephone brought trouble between two women living in the same house is revealed in the $5,000 damage suit for alleged assault brought by Mary E. McCarthy against Mrs. Henrietta Haberland, both of No. 135 Dudley avenue, Roxbindale.

Mrs. Haberland denies striking Mrs. McCarthy. She explained:

"I never touched Mrs. McCarthy. She had been using our telephone, which is in the hall. She lives upstairs. When I told her she must not use it, she kept on doing so just the same.

"On December 24 last I heard her apparently go out. Then I felt a draft coming from the hall through my dining room. I went out and there she was at the telephone again. I told her again that she must let the telephone alone. She told me she wasn't using it, and that I was stupid and foolish. But I did not strike her."

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Breathe Freely! Clears Stuffed-up, Inflamed Nose and Head and Stops Catarrhal Discharge. Cures Dull Headache.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get one small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membranes which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed, nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucus dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing, but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

SERVICES FOR BACON ARE HELD IN U.S. SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Honors today were paid the memory of Senator Augustus Octavius Bacon of Georgia today in the Senate chamber, where for twenty years he had helped to shape the course of national legislation.

The casket was conveyed from the apartments of the late Senator by automobile hearse, accompanied by Charles F. Higgins, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate. The chairs usually occupied by Senators were grouped in a semi-circle in front of the Vice-President's desk for members of the cabinet and the Supreme Court. Immediately back of these seats chairs were placed for the use of the diplomatic corps.

Vice-President Marshall opened the funeral ceremonies with a brief address, after which Rev. Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, chaplain of the Senate, delivered the benediction, and the brief ceremony was concluded by a second brief speech by Vice-President Marshall, who said:

"Into the loving hands of the committees of Congress and the officers of the Senate, we consign the mortal body of our well beloved Senator, to be by them conveyed to his home in the State of Georgia, there to be deposited in its final resting place. May his labors in the cause of constitutional liberty long bless the republic."

Grandson Ames Defends Butler

Adelbert Ames, Jr., grandson of the late General Benjamin F. Butler, charges that Moorfield Storey's testimony before a committee of the Legislature on February 5 on the proposed Butler statue was "a series of contemptible innuendoes and misrepresentations." He denies the theft charges against Butler.

Report Finding of a New Inca City

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The steamship Byron, which arrived today from Trinidad, brought Captain Campbell Besley and members of the Besley expedition which has been exploring in South America. They brought word of the finding of a new Inca city near the headwaters of the Amazon.

HITS AT BACK BAY

"Pastors Lost in Wreckage."

SCOUT JONAH TALE

No one of any account in the Back Bay believes that a whale swallowed Jonah. Nobody in the Back Bay believes the world was made in six days, nor that there is a place of everlasting punishment.

Nobody believes in a bodily resurrection, nor in the literal interpretation of the Trinity. New England theology is confessedly dead and the orthodox theologians in the Back Bay are lost in the wreckage.—The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Park of the First Church, in The Christian Register.

GALLINGER TO WAGE WAR ON VIVISECTION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Senator Gallinger, who is himself a physician, today announced that he will immediately begin a nation-wide campaign against human vivisection. He will introduce in the Senate this week a resolution calling upon the public health and marine hospital service of the navy for a national investigation of the experimental work upon infants and others in New York.

Should the statements which have been made prove true Senator Gallinger will then introduce in the Senate a bill providing adequate punishment for felony of any physician who experiments with a human being. He proposes that the penitentiary sentence shall be obligatory.

"These reports," he said, "show that the vivisectionists have violated their creed. They have always said the only purpose was to save lives by experimenting with animals and hopelessly sick persons. Now it appears that they have inoculated normal children to make tests of serum. The children in the New York city hospitals for treatment for diseases they did not have before the experiments with serums.

"From what I have read I am convinced that a prima facie case has been made out against some practitioners. I desire that all the facts be brought to light."

The case of little Harry Rosenberg of No. 407 East Sixtieth street is one of several similar ones revealed by the AMERICAN. According to his mother, Mrs. Nathan Rosenberg, the boy contracted a loathesome blood disease while in Riverside Hospital last April.

The boy, who will be three years old on July 4 next, was removed to that hospital because he was suffering from measles. Two weeks after his return home in early May it was discovered that he was suffering from another disease.

"I was worried and at once consulted a physician," said Mrs. Rosenberg last night. "My poor child's case was diagnosed as that of a rotten blood disease and I at once started treatment at Blackwell's Island. Due to the work of the physicians there it is cured now—possibly."

Fitzgerald and Curley at Banquet

For the first time since the election of Mayor Curley, both he and ex-Mayor Fitzgerald will be present at a banquet this evening. They will be guests at the annual banquet of the Holy Name Society of St. Patrick's Church of Roxbury to be held in Ribernian Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury. It is expected that Cardinal O'Connell will be present.

READERS SEEK TO UNWIND THE CLOCK PUZZLE

Tick-tock, tick-tock, go the half million brains endeavoring to solve the AMERICAN clock puzzle. Everybody's doing it; are you? Our readers are certainly "keeping time" to their endeavor to "unwind" this latest clock puzzle tangle. Brush away the cobwebs from your intellectual "wheels" and apply yourself to the solution of this fascinating brain twister. Here is the problem:

"If a calendar clock, which indicates the second, minute, hour and the day of the month stands the correct time at 5 p. m. on Saturday, January 19, and gains 15 minutes daily, what will be the correct time when the clock indicates that it is 5 p. m. on February 17?"

Here are some of the answers:

SURE WAY TO END RHEUMATISM

Ease Stiff, Sore Joints and Muscles. Makes Pains and Backache Promptly Vanish.

It is needless to suffer any longer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can surely avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and it is useless to rub on liniments or take ordinary remedies to relieve the pain. This only prolongs the misery and can't possibly cure you.

The only way to cure rheumatism is to remove the cause. The new discovery, Croxone, does this because it neutralizes and dissolves all the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, for which reason it irritates and causes rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped-up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter all the poisons from the blood and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is the most wonderful medicine ever made for curing chronic rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. You will find relief from the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all your misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle at any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache or overcome urinary disorders.

Cardinal O'Connell to Christen Child

Adrienne Fontana is to be christened tomorrow. Edwardo Ferrari Fontana and his wife, Margaret Mattemauer Fontana, are going to make of the affair a fete that shall be remembered in musical circles for a long time. Cardinal O'Connell will perform the ceremony. It is unusual for the cardinal to personally officiate, but he is a great lover of music, a composer, and an admirer of this ideally mated pair of opera singers.

Editor Is Found Dead in Snow Drift

HARLEM CITY, L. I., Feb. 17.—Edward N. Townsend, editor of the Nassau County Republican, was found dead today partially buried in a snow drift at the front door of his home. He had been overcome by the cold.

FIGHT THIEVES ON 9TH STORY FIRE ESCAPE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Shin bandred feet above the street upon a slippery snow-covered fire escape two detectives and two thieves fought a sensational battle today at Forty-ninth street.

Two men were surprised on the ninth floor, but when the detectives attempted to arrest them they fled to the fire escape. Before they could get to the street, however, the detectives and startled people in the street below had surrounded the building. Then the fire escape and the fight began. Several times the men swayed perilously near the edge and nearly fell into the street below, but the detectives finally drew handcuffs and overcame their antagonists.

Dr. Mary Walker Taken for Burleson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—It is said that the Postmaster-General standing behind Mrs. Burleson's chair, I wonder as friend of Mrs. Thomas S. Patten, wife of the Representative of New York. "I mean directly behind Mrs. Burleson, the little man wearing the frock coat and light kid gloves," pursued her friend.

"Good gracious, no," replied Mrs. Patten, "that's Dr. Mary Walker, the only woman in the world who wears clothes by virtue of a special statute."

Hold Suitor for Girl Slain in Cemetery

CITY LEADERS UNITED FOR PROMOTION OF 'BOOM BOSTON' FUND

Mayor Curley's "Boost Boston" fund climbed to 'steenth and 'steen at a meeting marked by enthusiasm, speech-making, plans for cooperation and a general disposition to forget the past, which was noted by men and one woman to the old shiremanic chamber.

The sensation of the meeting came when former Mayor Fitzgerald entered, and was invited to sit beside Mayor Curley in the chairman's place. Later Mayor Curley turned to refer to Mr. Fitzgerald as "His Honor the Mayor," and nobody cracked a smile. And to cap the climax, Fitzgerald responded to an invitation to speak with a full-hearted burst of praise for his successor, and for the Boost Boston fund — and with a $25 contribution.

Louis K. Liggett was the only $1,000 contributor of the meeting. Annie Pope also chipped down for $1,000 at the last meeting, and who subsequently relegated the Mayor for doing this without authority. As he is now a non-paying member of the committee in charge of the fund, and contributing $2,000, handing a check to Joseph H. O'Neil, who was acting as treasurer pro tem —in the name of the Moore Shipping Company.

It was voted to increase the committee's membership from five to twenty-five. It was further voted that the committee should upon written request of any subscriber, tell that subscriber anything he wanted to know about the personnel of the committee. Mayor Curley announced that he will probably meeting to serve as permanent chairman of the committee.

The meeting opened at five minutes past 3. Mayor Curley had come in once, then returned to his office for something. A moment after his re-entrance, former Mayor Fitzgerald pushed through the crowd and succeeded to dispose himself in a seat in the front row. Mayor Curley caught his eye and invited him to come up to the platform. Mr. Fitzgerald without comment accepted, and the two shook hands.

Then Mayor Curley arose and explained the purpose of the gathering —to raise a fund to boom Boston financially, industrially and commercially. He said that "There was only $10,000 raised at the last meeting. Since then $18,000 has come in. The fund now stands at $28,000." Some people smiled, for the Mayor had evidently dropped off his list the "contributions" from Allan Forbes, the Transcript and the Advertiser, which had raised the number of contributions of the first meeting to a figure well above $40,000.

CITIZEN GIVES $1.

"We have," Mayor Curley said, "inquiries from eight concerns which want to come to Boston. They will increase our realty valuation $1,000,000 and will have annual payrolls of that amount."

Then he asked Joseph H. O'Neil of the Federal Trust Company to act as treasurer in place of William A. Baston, who was unable to be present. Arthur McVey was acting as secretary in place of John S. McVey —his brother. Of the original committee — including Mr. Gaston, Mr. McVey, Charles Francis Adams, 2d, and Philip H. Stockton, only Mr. Stockton—so far as could be learned, was present.

Then Mayor Curley announced recent subscriptions — two of which were for $1 each. One of these came from John F. Gillis of Brighton, and the other from a "Willing Citizen." Mayor Curley read the name of the "Willing Citizen" and said it showed the proper spirit.

Mayor Curley read letters from enterprises anxious to come to Boston, and it was at this point he waved toward Mr. Fitzgerald beside him and referred to him as "His Honor, the Mayor." Nobody saw the mistake.

Then E. B. McDowell, a recent $1,000 contributor, moved, on Mayor Curley's suggestion, that the committee be enlarged to twenty-five members. The motion went through flying. Immediately afterward, Charles M. Cole arose with a slip of paper in his hand, and said:

"I think this undertaking is a very fine one, and especially the attitude that a $1 contribution means as much as a $1,000 one. I should like to put in a small subscription. I hope to subscribe $100. But only on condition that Honor will put this motion, and that it be agreeable to the subscribers."

FORBES JOINS COMMITTEE.

He then handed the motion in writing, along the table to Mayor Curley. Mayor Curley read:

"It is moved that the trustees in charge of this fund shall at all times give to any subscriber who so demands in writing, full information in regard to disbursements from the fund." Mayor Curley read it, then said: "If no one else seconds, I will be glad to."

But there was another second, and the motion went through without dissent. Mayor Curley said he would defer appointing the new members of the committee till the next meeting. He pursued:

"I feel that the committee should comprise men who have made a success in many different walks of life. I will therefore take some time for my choice. However, I will say that to bring about a condition of harmony, and co-operation, I did extend to one gentleman an invitation to serve on this committee. I believe it will be all right if I now follow that obligation by asking Mr. Allen Forbes to serve."

Mayor Curley said the Stanley Works of New Britain, Ct., are thinking of moving, and he had asked Mr. Forbes to go there. To which he replied Mr. McDowell, as the representative of a firm which is considering here. Mr. McDowell made an earnest appeal to everybody to get together for Boston, and was applauded to the echo.

Then Mayor Curley called on former Mayor Fitzgerald, who said:

FITZGERALD CONGRATULATES.

"I think this movement has more promise than anything done to promote the industry of Boston for many years, and I congratulate the Mayor on the success thus far achieved.

"We've got to get together. We've got together before, and we have doubled our passenger traffic in two years. Co-operation is what we need, and organization.

"I remember the day on the splendid policy he has inaugurated in Boston. When people were asked to contribute anything from $1,000 to five cents, there was no trouble to get all we asked. In those days we had lunches, got to work ourselves, and we have certainly got to work to boost Boston."

Mayor Curley then said he would give $100, J. Reed Whittle said he would give $100, and Joseph H. O'Neil said he would give $100. Shipping Board contributor Jones gave $100.

Rear Admiral Allan Forbes stepped to the table and dropped on it a $250 check for Mr. Moore Shipping Company.

Joseph Jones [illegible] "Friend of Boston" and handed $20 gold eagle on the table. Louis K. Liggett was then called upon to speak, said:

"I would gladly make my contribution $10 or $100, but I have a hundred dollars. It will work as hard as any dollar I have got. I have hard and such matters for incoming companies, but no Boston dollars."

NOT A CHARITY BOARD.

That's what the new concerns need—capital, I know. I've been through the mill right here in Boston."

"That's right," Mayor Curley interjected. "I'm glad to see the growing confidence on the part of business men in public life. It is typified by the offer of this building to finance new companies—charging them regular interest, it is good one. This is not a charity board for [illegible] that we are offering."

Former Mayor Fitzgerald wanted to hear about Mr. Liggett's experience in trying to raise capital in Boston. Mr. Liggett said:

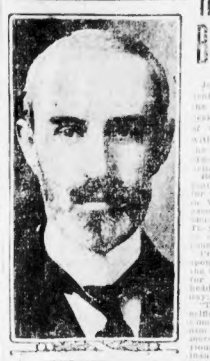
"I don't believe Boston people know what the outside world thinks of them. Everybody knows Boston is a centre of education. But few know it is also a centre of wealth. Within twenty miles of the building is concentrated 15 per cent. of the wealth of the United States."

Mayor Curley cut in, "I'd like to say, Mr. Liggett, that it took me a year and a half in the city council to get an appropriation for a street that you could send teams along."

Mr. Liggett raised a roar of laughter by replying that was "Your Honor, I'd appreciate it very much if you would build that street." And Mayor Curley vowed that was the [illegible] he was going to do.

SEEKS CARNEGIE PLANT.

The meeting adjourned till Thursday at 4 o'clock. After the formal session Mayor Curley said that the Carnegie Steel Company of Pittsburgh is seeking the right to erect a certain, little-used street in Boston. If they get it, they will build a half-million dollar plant and employ 2,000 of men. I'm going to see if there's any reason why they couldn't have that street."



JOHN H. FAHEY, new president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

NEW COMMERCE HEAD FAHEY HAS BUSINESS PLANS

John H. Fahey, newly-elected president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was back at his desk today on the eleventh landing of the Tremont building, rubbing with enthusiasm over the plans and the prospects of the young but hoary organization of which he is now the president.

Mr. Fahey has reason to feel proud that one of the citizens was chosen for the high office at the convention in Washington last week. Business associates of Mr. Fahey say he intends to make a hit in the berth. They say a better hustler and boomer could not have been found in the country over.

President Fahey realizes the responsibilities of his office as leader of the national chamber, but he is eager for the fray. He will make his headquarters in Boston. He said today:

"There is nothing partisan or selfish, no politics in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Its aim is to encourage trade and commercial intercourse between the various states of the United States and the insular possessions of the United States and with foreign countries.

"It is a co-operative organization made up of the various chambers of commerce, boards of trades and kindred industrial and commercial organizations, to increase their efficiency and extend their usefulness. It is to serve the nation in exactly the same capacity as a local chamber of commerce serves the community in which it is located.

"One of the first and most vital problems to be taken up by the Chamber of Commerce of the United states the proposed changes in legislation relative to the Sherman anti-trust law.

"A special committee of twenty has been studying the trust legislation for a year and a sub-committee of seven is to be selected the latter part of this week. This sub-committee will begin work at Washington within ten days studying all the new laws before the national legislature. The names of the committee of seven will be announced the latter part of the week. We are trying to get a Boston man to serve. They will all be experts in their respective branches of research."

Mr. Fahey is a young man for the job. He got his early training as a journalist. He was at on time New England manager of the Associated Press, of which organization he was vice-president. He was for five years publisher of the Boston Traveler. He has been a director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and conducted the European tour a few years ago. He took an active part in organizing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. He was chairman of the executive committee.

SISTER AGNES, 71, ANGEL TO POOR BULGARS

BOSTON, Feb. 17.—Mrs. Archibald Hale, the well-known writer, received today a letter from her sister, who is the famous Sister Augustia of Sofia, known throughout the Balkans as the "Angel of Charity." She is seventy-one years old, and has just recovered from a serious illness, the journey she describes and on behalf of the suffering refugees a deed of heroism. She writes:

"I have just been on the most adventurous journey that has ever fallen to my lot. The Macedonian Relief Society sent me $125 for the Servian refugees. It was a month before the Serbs would give me a passport to leave Saloniea, but accompanied by Sister Agnes, who is rather frail, we eventually started.

FELL FROM SADDLE.

"When we reached Doirau station we found no carriages, so we reduced to the use of a springless cart in which to drive to the frontier. Next day we started for the other Servian frontier.

"After five hours' journey we reached the crest of a mountain [illegible] occupying a hut [illegible] of reeds guarded the boundary. Then we were obliged to send to the Bulgarian side for horses.

"After two hours these arrived. It was cold waiting on that mountain. There was only a boy to accompany us, although we carried all the money. It was an awful road, a goat path across the Balkan Mountains marked by mud and rocks.

"The mud was eight inches deep then. The rocks crossed one another so there was no room for the horses' feet. The precipices were too deep to look over. Suddenly my saddle slipped round, depositing me on a rock.

AIDED THE WIDOWS.

"By God's help we reached Strumnitza. Next morning began the distribution of maize flour to 2,000 refugees, while there were 10,000 in neighboring villages. Next day we went to a village where 350 persons were squeezed into the few houses the Turks had left. They were in terrible straits. The snow was falling heavily.

"Then we went to the village of Batallo, where we helped numbers of widows and wives whose husbands were imprisoned.

"I am still distributing bread daily. I don't know where the money will come from, but I put my trust in Providence and keep on feeding the hungry. It is easy for me to get credit and trust in providence to provide the funds to repay."

Quincy Girl's Death Puzzle to Doctors

The nature of the disease which led to the death of fifteen-year-old Lillian Erickson at her home in Quincy is a mystery to several specialists. It is thought a peculiar nervous condition superinduced starvation which proved fatal. The girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terence H. Erickson of No 217 New York avenue, Quincy.

SOLONS WORKING HARD SHOVELING AWAY GREAT DRIFT OF LEGISLATION

Some of the problems your legislators are wrestling with in committee rooms at the State House today are:

Limiting the number of junk dealers in Boston.

Founding a State university.

Establishing free scholarships in institutions of higher education.

Abolition of party enrolment.

Appointment of a public accident commissioner.

To investigate the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.

To prohibit the sale and use of ice crackers.

On the quantity of malt liquor to make a barrel.

That Worcester may place seats in public places.

That certain persons be not classed as tramps in Worcester.

Licensing of barbers.

Cold storage of eggs.

Salaries of judges and clerks in Boston Municipal Court.

Privileges of non-resident owners of motor vehicles.

Fixing the capacity of street cars.

Exemption from fare of those who stand.

Investigation of public ownership of street railways.

* * *

Beacon Hill committees are still speeding away at record-breaking speed. On the list of hearings for today are 128 different bills. On the great majority of them, of course, the recommendation will be that the petitioner be given "leave to withdraw."

* * *

William N. Osgood, prominent Boston attorney, is before Joint Judiciary today arguing his bill for the appointment of a public accident commissioner.

* * *

Under this bill—and it will be forth while to watch its progress before the committee and in the Legislature—public service corporations would be compelled to report to the commissioner the accidents causing personal injuries to persons other than employes.

* * *

The Osgood bill provides, further, that all settlements for damages made by such corporations, out of court, shall be void unless a certificate of approval, that such settlements are "fair and just," is attached to them by the Public Accident Commissioner. The commissioner is given the power to investigate any case, when he deems investigation necessary, by going upon the premises of the corporation and examining any person or thing.

* * *

"This bill," Mr. Osgood said today, "does not relate to workmen's compensation. It pertains to the public in general. It covers a very important public matter. It is intended to prevent unjust and meagre settlements, out of court, too frequently made with injured persons by claim agents, physicians and other representatives of public service corporations. It places the injured citizen on a more nearly equal footing with the corporation, and under the protection of the Commonwealth."

* * *

What everybody wants to know just now is what the Committee on Constitutional Amendments will do with the question of Votes for Women.

* * *

The Suffragists want an amendment to the Constitution submitted to the men of the State, striking the word "male" from the qualifications of voters.

* * *

The "antis"—and there are thousands of women in the Massachusetts Association opposed to the further extension of suffrage to women—say that the question ought not to be submitted to the voters of Massachusetts because there is "no public demand" for the submission.

* * *

"Well, if there isn't," say the Suffragists, "they fuss about it? Why not let the men vote and demonstrate that they're against us?"

* * *

"If it is going to be submitted," reply the Antis, "let the WOMEN vote on it. We know that the women of Massachusetts, or a majority of them, are NOT ready for the burden."

* * *

"But the women cannot vote on anything," say the Suffragists, "and we are trying to get them that right! Don't you see?"

* * *

The Massachusetts protest against the passage in Wasnington of the Burnett immigration bill, with its literacy test, has not yet been forwarded to the nation's capital.

* * *

* * *

Representative Webster having so declared himself, the resolutions of protest has been recommitted to the committee on Federal Relations. A public hearing will be held. Mr. Webster and his friends will tell why they are against such a protest at this time.

* * *

The hacks, cabs and taxicabs you see stationed in front of the big hotels of this town pay 10 per cent. of their collections to the hotels.

* * *

So the Committee on Legal Affairs is told by S. B. Batchelder, representing the Boston Hotel Association, in opposition to the Robinson-Haines bill opening the hotel stands to general competition.

* * *

"If such a bill as this were passed by the Legislature," declared Edgar Pierce for the Touraine, the Parker House and Young's, "we should have to post in every room of our hotels a statement that the company cannot assume responsibility for the cabs."

* * *

"And," said Manager Hart of the Touraine, "bear in mind that no lady will get into a taxicab alone without knowing who stands responsible for that taxi. Today, as everybody knows, it is the hotel."

* * *

The Grafton & Upton gushing purification of the House press gallery still hangs in the balance and stands next in the orders of the day.

* * *

The stalwart Republican Speaker of the House, as was told in the Sunday AMERICAN two or three weeks ago, warned reporters to sign a statement that:

I am not the agent or representative of of any person or corporation interested in legislation before the General Court, and I will not act as the representative of any such person or corporation while I retain my place in the gallery.

* * *

Representatives of the Springfield Republican, the Lynn Item, the Boston Globe, the Boston Herald, the Boston Post and the AMERICAN have declined to sign this statement.

* * *

These men have no quarrel with Speaker Cushing. It can be truthfully said that the colleagues of most of them have the strongest personal regard for him. They hold that they cannot declare, in truth, that they are not the representatives of corporations "interested in legislation."

* * *

In a broad sense, newspapers are interested in ALL legislation. In the narrower sense, they are interested as corporations in the fate of several bills pending before the Legislature, having to do with advertising, libel, news and even the sale of newspapers.

* * *

These things have been called to the attention of Mr. Cushing in the kindliest way possible. To the great surprise of the reporters interested, the Speaker holds to it that the reporters must take the Cushing rule or leave it.

* * *

The situation has not been improved by the report that one of the corps was told by the Speaker, in effect, that the Cushing rule does not quite mean what it says.

* * *

Reporters competent to write of legislation and politics are not children. They want Mr. Cushing's rule to say what it means and means what it says. There is not a man of the "Federal League" at the State House who will not sign any reasonable rule and sign it immediately. For instance:

As the representative of the Daily Telegraph I affirm that I am not the agent or the representative of ANY OTHER person or corporation interested in legislation before the General Court, and I will not act as the representative of ANY SUCH OTHER person or corporation while I retain my place in the gallery.

* * *

There probably would be no serious objection to adding to this a stronger declaration:

I shall ask no member of the House to vote for or against any pending legislation.

* * *

Honest and competent newspapermen will insist, however, on the right to discuss legislation with legislators—not on the floor of the House, of course—and to ask legislators, after a vote, what they want to say to the general public in explanation of the vote.

U. S. Attorney Asks Woman Assistant

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—Recommendation that Mrs. A. A. Adams be appointed one of his assistants has been forwarded to Washington by John W. Preston, United States District Attorney. Mrs. Adams is a graduate of the University of California and a law partner of Miss Marguerite Ogden, a daughter of Judge Ogden of Alameda County.

Says Landlords Need Protection

"Landlords rather than the 'middle classes' need protection," said Samuel W. Johnson, South Boston real estate owner to the Legislative Judiciary Committee in opposing a petition of Representative John J. Cummings of Boston to extend the time notice for evictions. James C. Fennell, for the Socialist party, argued for a law to forbid eviction in Winter.

'UNDER COVER' NEW SUNSHINE CLUB RECRUIT

William Courtenay and all other members of the "Under Cover" Company of the Plymouth Theatre, whose long run and enormous success has been mentioned by any theatregoer, are added to the 1914 sunshine club members today. Their collective vote for joining follows:

To take this opportunity publicly to make a loyal and appreciative utterance which has made it possible for us to remain in Boston the success of the "Under Cover" company.

GEORGE A. PRINGLE, with the Paul Revere Trust Co., Boston—Nothing like being up to date. I'm only twenty-one. A sunshine word, of course, will always live. Sunshine and courage go on and on, forever.

RALPH PETER WILKINS, Peabody, Mass.—I go to join the Sunshine Club. I believe in plenty of light and the success of the Teamsters' Union.

MAUD B. BRIDGE, Marblehead—Because I want to see my name in print, just like the "sunshine men" in the picture. He doesn't laugh here, because he can't.

MRS. NANCY HERSHALGH, No. 172 Dean street, New Bedford—Because I am on the sunny side of life, believe in unity and want all New England to prosper.

ARTHUR W. GREENHALGH, New Bedford—I like the sunshine. It puts new life into me.

CHARLES A. GREENHALGH, New Bedford—Because the Sunshine Club helps bring us together to work for happiness and prosperity.

G. W. SWEENEY, Haverhill, Me.—Because Pathe—We have a little sunshine in our home, and hope to have more. Good luck to all Sunshine Club members.

RICHARD A. DUNN, No. 18 Datona street, Boston—Because I want opulence, and am going to get it quickly.

CLARENCE HOWARD SHERMAN, No. 214 Armory street, Springfield—Our State and country needs prompt, more rapidly if optimists outnumbered pessimists.

JOHN J. TUCKER, No. 20 Elm street, Valley Falls, R. I.—Your club has my unqualified approval. I shall try to induce others to join, too.

HAROLD JONES, No. 4 Bolton street, Somerville—It pays to thank our friends before they do for us. Good turn. You may need help again.

F. FISHER, No. 11 Asylum street, Hartford, Ct.—In trying to help them in our every-day life we can dispel all gloom. Make it millions instead of 600,000.

WAS MISERABLE COULDN'T STAND

Testifies She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lackawanna, N. Y.—"After my first child was born I felt very miserable and could not stand on my feet. My sister-in-law wished me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my nerves became some firm, appetite good, step elastic, and I was not weak, tired feeling. That was six years ago and I have had three fine healthy children since. For female troubles I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it works like a charm. I do all my own work."—Mrs. A. F. KREAMER, 1374 Electric Avenue, Lackawanna, N. Y.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

Women who suffer from these distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been as successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This Autocar Does the Work of 6 Horses at Less Cost

Averages 50 miles a day for Adams & Swett Cleansing Company, reducing their operating expenses and increasing their territory.

EVERY merchant should know exactly his delivery costs each year. The Autocar Company is constantly helping business concerns, large and small, to handle this important subject. Our expert engineers, with years of study behind them, will advise you as to just how many motor units and horse units are best and most economical for the delivery of your merchandise. If a certain number of horses are necessary, we will tell you so. If one or more motor vehicles are necessary we will advise you accordingly.

Adams & Swett Cleansing Company, of Roxbury, Mass., have profited by such investigation. We showed them that an Autocar could cut down their delivery costs and widen their territory. They bought their car in the Spring of 1913, and something of their enthusiasm over its work can be gained from the following statement recently made by them:

"There is no question that our Autocar has been of immense value to our business. Before we bought it, we were skeptical about motor trucks, fearing that they were expensive luxuries and were often stuck on the road. But seven months of continuous service over all sorts of roads without a sign of a breakdown has dispelled that belief, at least with regard to the Autocar.

"In those seven months our car has covered about 8,687 miles, or approximately 40 miles per working day. We figure that to do the same work with horses would require three teams and three drivers. This shows a large financial saving in operating expenses in favor of the Autocar, for we work our horses only one-half day each, and would, therefore, need six horses and three men to cover the district that is being covered by our Autocar with one driver and one helper.

"Fifty years in the cleansing business has established our reputation for prompt deliveries, and we find that the Autocar makes it far easier to reach our customers promptly than before. The amount of ground it covers is truly astonishing.

Before purchasing the car we were a little doubtful of its power, but find that it easily negotiates any hill we meet. The short wheel base, too, is an advantage in short turns and in crowded streets. The only times the Autocar has been out of commission was for replacement of tires, and we consider it a first class investment in every particular.

"Our delivery territory has been materially widened out and we are constantly getting new customers in localities we never reached before with any satisfaction."

'WITHIN THE LAW' STRIKES HUMAN NOTE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Into a season that has been crowded almost to the limit of its capacity with melodrama—good and bad—comes "Within the Law." Instead of a dictagraph to help you along with your drama and stir your emotions you now have the Maxim silencer. 'Tis merely another instance of science and good mechanics lending a hand where it will do the most good.

But "Within the Law" needs little help from mechanical inventions as any play that has ever been written on this continent. It stood on its own sturdy feet at the majestic last evening and hammered its way into the hearts of a big audience in a fashion that left no doubt as to its dramatic force.

There was much more to "Within the Law" than the Maxim silencer. Before you decide that it is responsible for anything in the form of a theatrical dish to stir your deepest emotions, wait until you have spent an evening at the Majestic. At last evening's performance you were entertained and amused to a degree that the theatre seldom affords, and you were thrilled in spite of yourself.

Most frankly melodramatic than any that has been presented since A. H. Woods dowsed popular prices for the more profitable drama as it is cut. "Within the Law" attracts a vitally human note that was irresistible. It pounded on your shirt bosom until you surrendered and gave way to solid enjoyment as the much mistreated young heroine did dreadful but wicked and illegal things and got away with it.

You see, she was the victim of a hard-hearted storekeeper who first paid her starvation wages and then had her sent to prison for a theft she didn't commit. Thoroughly enjoyed her novel revenge, which she accomplished by putting herself in charge of a band of crooks, adopting the police of big business concerns by doing criminal things in a perfectly legal manner. The trap she laid for her former employer and which reached its climax in their marriage, was received with particular joy everybody.

So cleverly was the story of Mary Turner written that instead of being shocked at her disgraceful behavior you were with her heart and soul. Holding a bull of sympathy for such a woman who was openly directing shady operations but always keeping within the law, might have been a doubtful proceeding but not in Bayard Veiller's play. Mary has been so ill-used and so harassed that you gave her a free license to commit any crimes the calendar contains and immediately proceeded to do, under the advice of able counsel, after her release from prison. The development of splendid humor moved through the play, and the sordid, brutal theme was relieved at times from being a brilliant comedy.

Jane Cowl, who has been variously proclaimed the most natural woman on the stage, did not seem so flimsy a support to carry the exceedingly trying and difficult situations. She gave Mary Turner the benefit of an intelligence and subtlety that was more enduring than any physical attribute. But she was fair to look upon. Florence Nash, in the comedy sub role, sparkled with fresh and delicious comedy. Orrin Johnson served faithfully as a lover who was almost too good to be true. William B. Mack, as the district attorney, Edward Garson, who began with crime and finished almost in view of the electric chair.

The Inspector Burke of Wilton Taylor was as hard as nails, while Dodson Mitchell gave harsh humor to the role of Edward Gibbs, the man who started all the trouble.

"Within the Law" gripped you as no other play has done this season—it rang true. It had thrilling theme real and a large measure of good humor that bit you squarely on the funny bone.

News of Other Attractions at Theatres

Grand Opera House.

The Robinson Crusoe burlesquers began a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House yesterday. It was a spirited entertainment, with many novelties.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Traffic in White Slaves" supplied the sensation in the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. It was one feature of a lively vaudeville program.

Orpheum Theatre.

Add Haven Minstrels occupied the place of honor in the new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. There were other music capabilities novelties in the bill too.

Waldron's Casino.

The American Beauties matured upon a week of good entertainment at Waldron's Casino yesterday. It was high class burlesque, with the usual spots of girls.

St. James Theatre.

Kenny and Hollis, two lively comedians, headed the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday. It supplied a new assortment of chatter. There were other attractive acts on the program.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Follies of Fleasure," which sounds well, at any rate, came to the Old Howard Athenaeum in the form of some new burlesque numbers. It was a jolly show, with a score of lush stepping young women.

Pastime Theatre.

The white slave picture now reached the Pastime Theatre, where yesterday, for their initial showing, "Shackled Souls" was exhibited to large audiences. The story of the photo-play was drawn from actual and an actual incident.

Scollay Square Olympia.

One of the bright features of the new bill at the Scollay Square Olympia yesterday was found in the Neilson aerial ballet, one method in new nationality. Other features of the program was made up of wonderful trapeze performances and new motion pictures. As usual the big organ in the theatre was used for a special treat.

Extra Matinees.

On account of the tremendous demand for seats for the Wednesday matinee performances of the Lawrence Haile play, the management of the Boston Theatre has decided to inaugurate a new policy, beginning Sunday, February 23. Beginning that week matinees will be given on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, at the usual reduced scale of prices now in effect for the Wednesday matinees. Seats for the twenty-five and fifty cents.

Gaiety Theatre.

In these days of high speed in entertainment, as well as in other things, you are interested or almost anything. The Taxi girls, however, caught you off your guard in the Gaiety yesterday, for there was nothing of the familiar burlesque entertainment in the new bill. Aided by the way of novelty, they departed from the usual routine of conventional burlesque and presented a round of filthy that was worth taking.

Plays That Remain.

"Under Cover" continues as the success of the season at the Plymouth. There never was a better melodrama. Richard Carle and Hattie Williams, in "The Devil," continue at the Colonial. It is both amusing and melodious.

Robert Hilliard will remain at the Park with "The Argyle Case" for only two weeks exclusively. Then he will try it.

"Way Down East" continues to supply Boston Theatre audiences with good entertainment in a rural setting.

Joseph Santley, in "Dreams Come True," is drawing large audiences to the new Tort Theatre. Here you can see the real tango.

"Traffic in Souls," with the police chasing white slavers, began a new week at the Globe Theatre yesterday.

The Arctic Scenic motion pictures of the Antarctic continue at Tremont Temple. It is an attractive as well as instructive entertainment.

SCENE FROM "UNDER COVER" AT THE PLYMOUTH

Dramatic climax in the fourth act of the stirring modern drama, "Under Cover," when the U. S. customs chief, Daniel Taylor, played by De Witt Jennings, who has been tracing the smugglers of a $1 00,000 diamond necklace through the assistance of Miss Ethel Cartwright, played by Miss Lilly Cahill, jumps through the doorway with drawn revolver and shouts to Steven Denby, the mysterious "X. Y." of the play, played by William Courtenay, to "Throw up your hands." The customs chief, who is a notorious grafter, thinks he has made a wonderful capture, but for is himself trapped by the clever X. Y. comes the unfolding of the mysterious plot and a happy ending of it all.—DRAWN BY WILLIAM STEVENS.

MAGGIE KLINE HEADS BILL AT B.F. KEITH'S

With Maggie Cline, "The Irish Queen," as a headliner and a surrounding bill of novelties and stars, the audience at B. F. Keith's Theatre last evening was offered a melange seldom surpassed in interest and variety. That Maggie Cline occupies a real place in the affection of Boston audiences was proven by the reception which greeted her popular songs and by the uproar which followed her famous "McCluskey."

Louis A. Simon offered one of the funniest and most catchingly lilting opera comiques ever seen in vaudeville. The comedian appeared in "The New Persian Garden," a fantasy by Edgar Allen Woolf with music by Anatole Friedland. Mr. Simon appears as Benchy, a valet, and his adventures in Persia are both amusing and interesting. From a spectacular point of view the production was most satisfying.

John Josefsson and his troop of Icelanders appeared in a thrilling exhibition of their native sport, "glima," showing how the Islanders defend themselves without the use of the hands. Will Oakland, America's premier tenor, presented his big singing novelty, "At the Club." Other features were Goldsmith and Hoppe, the "Two Salesmen," George W. Day and his company in "In Dutch," Farley and Morrison, character songs and dances, the Aerial Shaws in daring feats in midair and the Pathe Weekly.

Hitchcock Wins in "Beauty Shop"

There is a gleeful time with Raymond Hitchcock in "The Beauty Shop" at the Tremont Theatre.

The plot shifts Hitchcock, as a beauty doctor, to the island of Corsica, where he is the party of the first part in a full-grown vendetta which is working overtime to date him up with the undertaker. Given that general situation, the result is typical Hitchcock comedy work, ridiculously amusing, keen as a flash, and bubbling with rollicking fun.

Hitchcock's song, "All Dressed Up and No Place to Go," is one of the high spots on the program. Another is the start in curtain speech on the income tax. The star works unceasingly, singing, dancing, cracking jests, and with the same wonderful voice and inimitable smile.

There is tango in the dancing numbers, and Hitchcock tangoes too—just to show that he refuses to be overlooked in the doings of the day.

Anna Orr, one of the most winsome bits of girlhood that ever graced a stage in Boston, dances, sings and smiles her way into the hearts of the audience. Marion Sunshine as Lola, a Corsican beauty, is another who adds to the joy of the performance. Her tango specialties that bring rounds of hand-clapping.

Lawrence Wheat makes a bit for himself, too, in his "Um-pah Um-pah" song.

WILLIAM CRANE HEADS STARS IN NEW HENRIETTA

Boston snapped its chilly fingers at a young blizzard last night and filled the Hollis Street Theatre to welcome William H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks, Amelia Bingham and Patricia Collinge in in "The New Henrietta," a perfect riot of fun and laughter.

The oldsters turned out in numbers to see how much havoc Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes had wrought to the fine old property of Brougham Howard—and found it improved as plans. A punch, running water and electric lights improve an "abandoned" farm house. They were anxious to note—rather hoped to note, as is the way of oldsters—how far below the "Bertie" of Stuart Robson would fall the "Bertie" of Douglas Fairbanks, and, wonder of wonders, found themselves face to face with a new "Bertie" entirely, and loving him full as much as the old.

CONGRATULATIONS to Crane! The "Henrietta" still shows many a vein of rich ore. Congratulations to Fairbanks! who has fitted into a part which gave one American comedian national fame and leaves us with no regret for the players of a former sor, however much we miss him personally.

Youth saw, last night in "The New Henrietta," a new play, and Youth laughed unrestrainedly, which was pleasing to the ear. What is it all about? A wealthy old broker with middle-pated son, a crooked son-in-law, a perfect little darling of a niece and a strong weakness for a good looking and capable widow.

Crane was the broker, and enough said; Amelia Bingham was the widow; Fairbanks made the softpated one laughable and likeable; Patricia Collinge acted "natural," and so was the perfect little darling of a niece. Lesser parts were in expert hands, Malcolm Bradley shining in the role of an aged secretary.

'The Three Twins' at the National

For the second week of its engagement at the National Theatre the Morton Opera Company presented "The Three Twins," the clever musical comedy. Triple identities were used as the basis for many complications.

Two principals are twin brothers and have not met for several years. Arthur Morton Conrad is the third. Arthur tries to pose as the original of a photograph of one of the twins without the consent of a dyspeptic father to marry his daughter. Nellie Daly, one of the famous Daly family, was one of the leaders in the cast.

The musical comedy is filled with many tuneful numbers, which the "Yama Yagna Man." The plot is only a thread by which to string a series of beautiful tableaus, electrical displays and unique novelties. Miss Daly's singing, including "A Little Closer, Lovey Mine," Miss Nellie Daly in her "Yama Yama" song is assisted by a large chorus.

"Wedding Night" at the Shubert

"The Wedding Night," an elaborately staged musical comedy, with a beauty chorus of fifty or there-abouts, beautifully gowned, arrived at the Shubert Theatre from the New York Casino last evening in the midst of the blizzard.

But from the time the curtain rose until the costume parade at the close of the program the venturesome audience had no time to consider the climatic conditions outside.

The story of the comedy—which is unfortunately presented—is the experiences of a young Paris lawyer who marries in the provinces. Soon after he escorts his bride from the church, an actress whom he once loved deeply appears upon the scene.

The bridegroom does not tell his former sweetheart of his marriage for fear she may cause a scene and perchance produce some very endearing letters. The actress, of course, will cares for the bridegroom, and, in her efforts to be with him to awaken the old love for her, one embarrassing complication follows another until the young man is almost beside himself.

The cast provides Taylor Holmes, as the bridegroom; Alice Yorke, as the bride; Cecil Cunningham, as the actress; Joseph Phillips, as the best man; Jeffreys Lewis, as the bride's mother; Clara Palmer, as the maid; Joseph Herbert, as the Count Buzot, and Richard Temple, as the hotel proprietor. About twenty other players figure in the cast and fifty or more ravishing "ponies" and "show girls" contribute to the elaborate chorus numbers.

The finale of the evening—bound to be popular with the ladies—consists of a fashion parade, wherein the beauties of the chorus appear in the latest London and Paris styles.

'Stop Thief' Given at Castle Square

"Stop Thief" is the bill at the Castle Square Theatre this week and the John Craig players made a decided hit with the farce.

The plot involves the extraordinary happenings in a household where kleptomania is suspected. Two crooks enter the house and take advantage of this suspicion. William J. Carleton and Doris Olsson, as the two crooks, did clever work. Donald Meek is exceedingly good as James Cluney. Walter Walker did fine work as William Carr.

Augusta Gill appears as Carolina Carr. Florence Shirley as Joab Carr.

Fifty-Eighth Chapter

WITHIN the next few days the house-party arrived. There would be twenty of them at least, not counting valets and ladies' maids, so that large as Castle Rag was the house was full.

They were about equally divided as to sex and belonged chiefly to my husband's class, but they included Mr. Eastcliff's beautiful wife, Camilla, and Alma's mother, who, much to Alma's chagrin, had insisted upon being invited.

My husband required me to receive them, and I did so, though I was only their nominal hostess, and they knew it and treated me accordingly.

I should be ashamed to speak of the petty slights they put upon me, how they consulted Alma in my presence and otherwise wounded my pride as a woman by showing me that I had lost my own place in my husband's house.

I know there are people of the same class who are kind and considerate, guileless and pure, the true nobility of their country—women who are devoted to their homes and children, good—but my husband's friends were not of that kind.

They were vain and proud, selfish, self-indulgent, thoroughly insincere, utterly ill-mannered, shockingly illinformed, astonishingly ill-educated (capable of speaking several languages but incapable of saying a sensible word in any of them), living and flourishing in the world without religion, without morality, and (if it is not a cant phrase to use) without God.

What their conduct was when out shooting, picnicking, driving, fishing, motoring and yachting (for Mr. Eastcliff had arrived in his yacht), I will not know, for "doctor's orders" were Alma's excuse for not asking me to accompany them.

But at night they played bridge (their most innocent amusement), gambled and drank, banged the piano, danced "Grizzly Bears," sang duets from the latest musical comedies and then ransacked the empty house of their idle heads for other means of killing the one enemy of their existence—Time.

Sometimes they would give entertainments in honor of their dogs, when all the animals of all the guests (there seemed to be a whole kennel of them) would be dressed up in coats of silk and satin with pockets and pocket-handkerchiefs, and then led downstairs to the drawing-room, where Alma's wheasy spaniel and my husband's peevish terrier were supposed to receive them.

Then the world would give "freak dinners," when the guests themselves would be dressed up, the men in women's clothes, the women in men's, the male imitating the piping treble of the female voices, and the female the over-vowelled slang of the male, until, tiring of this foolishness, they would end up by flinging the food at pictures on the walls, the usual pellet being softened bread and the favorite target the noses in the family portraits, which, with the coloring of a sprawling mess, looked so ridiculous as to provoke screams of laughter.

The talk at table was generally of horses and dogs, but sometimes it was of love, courtship and marriage. Then Mr. Vyvian would remark that a favorite subject of ridicule, with both the women and the men.

Thus my husband would begin by saying the often said it in my hearing) that once upon a time men took their wives as they took their horses: on the strength of what they are "really with some women there was something to say for the old custom.

Then Mr. Vyvian would remark that it was "a jolly good idea, by Jove, and if he "ever married, by the Lord, that's just what he would do.

The Dear Fool

THE SENSATIONAL STORY OF THE LOVE OF A WOMAN OF 40 FOR A BOY OF 22

SYNOPSIS.

BETTY DUNBAR, a society widow, who lives with her sister, Ethel Troughton, a rich publisher, is in love with a youth of twenty-two named Cecil Batty. Is forty and has three children. She is loved devotedly, but in secret, by Sir Egbert Inglefield, a close friend, who is about her own age. When the story opens Betty is telling Sir Egbert of her infatuation for the youth. She admits that she will never marry Cecil because of the difference in their ages. "Aunt Ethel" appears just as Betty, Sir Egbert and the two boys have planned a picnic, and says that a telegram has arrived at the house for Betty. She is wildly excited. In the telegram Cecil tells her he is leaving for America the next day and must see her.

LORD MURDON held open the door, and with slow wonder in her dark-brown eyes Dolly Palgrave permitted herself to be taken to lunch.

Sir Egbert and Ethel were alone. Out in the arbor Bill sat, his head in his hands, praying for Jack, and longing for "Mummy" quite as if he were not an almost grown-up naval gentleman.

"Where can she be?" asked Sir Egbert, with fear gnawing at his heart.

"Where's he to be found?"

"God knows! She won't be back till the last train, anyhow. She's gone to say good-bye to her lover—and her child may die alone—and God sends children—to just such women."

Suddenly her passion spent itself and died out of her voice. "Dr. Wade doesn't need us," he said. "Come into the dining room."

"I have lunched, thanks—at the picnic with the boys, before"—Sir Egbert's deep voice lost its resonance.

"Very well," said Ethel; "I haven't the heart to my guests." The door closed quietly.

Eggy stood in dumb misery for a picture of lagging seconds—and then he went out in the arbor to help Bill, who mercifully didn't know exactly how much he had to bear.

And at Waterloo station a handsome fair Englishman, whom even a second glance did not quite betray as an actor, was helping a pretty little humming bird of a woman into a cab.

"Betty, you angel—the afternoon is ours. You look simply divine," said he.

But the afternoon was not quite theirs, for the grim reaper disputed their title to it all through long hours, while Betty tasted the cup of happiness and never guessed the cup of bitter luck that was brewing for her.

Somehow the "very luncheon dragged through its course somehow the hours of the long afternoon lagged their way into the past; and then at last poor Dr. Wade confessed that he could do no more, for still little Jack lay inert—silent and white.

"We will telegraph to London for Sir Edward Moore," said Ethel. "I have plenty of money," she added wearily, "and we must save the boy."

Austere, crabbed and sour, Ethel might be, but all her thwarted maternal instinct fed itself now on the fact that when Jack's mother failed him she, the ignored aunt, might still save the boy. And so glorying in her power to do all that might be done, and warmed to a new love and yearning to save, Ethel gave the child as much care and aid as Betty herself might have done had she been at hand instead of in London with her young lover.

At last Sir Edward arrived on the very seven forty train that should have brought Betty. But all through the night when skill and science waged their battle for the boy's life, Betty did not appear. In the final struggles of life with death, Betty's absence became a ineffable quantity. Ethel and Eggy sat on guard all night, watching and waiting for some turn in the grim tide that was carrying the sleep boy so far from their helpless ken.

At last with the morning, Dr. Wade came to them and told them that Sir Edward, greatest surgeon of his day, had decided that the one hope for the Jack lay in an operation. Eggy and Ethel looked at one another—"an operation." Grim chance this to take with some one else's child! But it was the only hope.

So poor, lonely, disconsolate Bill was sent out of the way, and given an interest with which to busy himself in being set to mowing the lawn. And Eggy set about giving the doctor what help he might in preparation for their sad and almost hopeless task, while Ethel sat on guard against any disturbance in the drawing room just outside the chamber of doom.

Long minutes linked by. Ethel sat on guard and thought of Fate's tricky cruelty. If she had been a mother—if little soft hands had clasped her—and if a dear voice had ever called her "mummy dear," surely she would never have sought other love so far from her own happy home. But the Marchioness of Murdon would never be the mother of the future lord, and Ethel's heart knew bitterness as well as fear for the little sad whose life might at any moment wing its weary path to an unknown future.

Ethel stood heavy-hearted and solemn and watched that other sturdy lad—a drooping figure in a sailor suit, as it pushed the heavy mowing machine across the lawn in eager desire to do anything that would help forget Jacky and the way he was beginning to that dear younger brother. To every one love and sorrow and pity the mistress of the Manor, the Future Marchioness of Murdon, must find her heart denied.

There was the swish and rustle of draperies from the hall without, and Ethel turned to face Betty.

"Where have you been?" asked the older sister, coldly and dispassionately.

Betty laughed lightly. "My gracious Ethel, what a greeting!" She noticed a mockery of her sister's sepulchral tone. "Where have you been? I've been to London, Ethel, dear, and I didn't come home as I promised, Ethel, dear, because I couldn't manage it, Ethel, dear; but I made all due inquiries about your umbrella, Ethel, dear, and, on the honor of the Army and Navy stores, you will receive it in a day or two."

WHIFFLES' BALCONY BUDS

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

WHIFFLES, an accepted suitor.
MME. DUPONT, his mother-in-law-to-be ..... MRS. LANGE

CHAPTER I.

Whiffles was short and chunky of build and awkward and embarrassed in the presence of ladies. He had a comical face with a wide mouth filled with sound teeth, and a broad, turned-up nose.

But he was an estimable young gentleman of independent income, living in choice bachelor apartments in the rather exclusive Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, No. 25. Therefore, Madame Dupont was content to give him her only daughter in marriage—her charming and demure little Lise.

Ordinarily Madame Dupont wore the aspect of a massive and truculent scrambler in skirts; but on the evening when Whiffles made his first call in the character of a definitely accepted suitor, she was grimly affable. Indeed, when Whiffles had risen to depart, and had knocked over a couple of chairs, and was shyly kissing the hand of his fiancee, Madame Dupont remarked, with a smile that was truly motherly:

"You may salute her on the lips, Monsieur—now that it is all arranged."

The first pressure of Lise's fresh young lips upon his own so agitated Whiffles that, in backing and bowing his way to the door, he knocked over two more chairs and a what-not.

Walking on air, his head among the stars, Whiffles went home early and quietly let himself in with his night-key. Imagine the shock to Whiffles' newly-acquired dignity when he beheld his butler in an advanced state of intoxication, seated in Whiffles' favorite easy chair and entirely surrounded by Whiffles' choicest wines and cigars!

"You impudent fellow," cried Whiffles, "clear up this mess, and then clear out. I will dispense with your services after this week!"

Now Whiffles' butler was not only impudent; there was an undercurrent of humorous malice in his character, which inspired him on the following day to "get even" with his bumptious employer. His acting head having evolved a plot that gave him immense satisfaction, he labored with pen and ink for an hour and then went out with the finished product in his pocket.

Whiffles spent that day and night in blissful anticipations that were soon to be dispelled in a manner truly amazing.

CHAPTER II.

While Whiffles, sleeping late, was still enjoying his dreams of bliss, Madame Dupont was reading an anonymous letter just delivered by the postman. This is what she read:

Dear Madame:

If you wish to see how your future son-in-law spends most of his time, call upon him at 2 p. m., Tuesday.

A FRIEND.

While awaiting the appointed hour, Madame Dupont's capable jaw continued to set itself firmer and harder. The stroke of the hour of 2 p. m. found her laboriously climbing the stairs leading to Whiffles' second-floor apartment. Being no lightweight, her progress was slow. So she suffered the added indignity of being jostled by three or four furbelowed, saucy minxes who tripped lightly past her and on to the door of Whiffles' apartment.

With a sense of outrage that nearly burst Madame Dupont's respectable corsets' laces, she saw the minxes admitted. Breathing heavily and palpitating with indignation, Madame Dupont saw half a dozen more giddy young creatures besiege Whiffles' chaste bachelor's door and gain admittance.

Madame Dupont did not follow them immediately. She took time to rehearse a fitting and effective vocabulary of epithets wherewith to obliterate Whiffles and his insulting pretensions.

Meantime, behold Whiffles, dumb with amazement, backed into a corner, defending himself against a bar-

rain counter rush of lovely young females demanding honest employment. They took him by the lapels of his coat, buttonholed him, seized his hands and nearly pulled his arms out of joint. Whiffles' astonished ears caught such phrases as these:

"I am considered exceedingly fast with my needle, Monsieur!"

"——familiar with all the latest modes, and"——

"My specialty is hand-embroidered panels for the shirt"——

"In all the varieties of fancy stitching, Monsieur, I"——

"——and the sole support of"——

"——show you a splendid recommendation from my last em"——

"I'm sorry, de louzez les femmes folles!" roared Whiffles. "Are you all crazy? What's this about? What do you want?"

In an instant half a dozen identical newspaper advertisement clippings were thrust into Whiffles' face, accompanied by indignant aspersions upon his character. In stupefaction Whiffles read:

Dressmaker hands wanted. Call personally 2 p. m., Tuesday, on Monsieur Whiffles, 25 Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle.

"Ah!" said Whiffles, "a joke. A malicious joke played on me by some enemy. I see that you are all dressmakers. Evidently my enemy knows that I am about to be married, and Whiffles was aroused at his own supposed—all dressmakers are charming!"

Another ring at his doorbell interrupted him. Whiffles answered the bell in person. As he opened the door to admit three more charming dressmakers, Whiffles was horror-stricken to observe the stout figure of Madame Dupont watching from an angle of the hallway.

"My new mother-in-law is out there," he stuttered. "In one second's short minute she'll ring my doorbell. Hide, all of you, quickly, for the love of heaven!"

Sympathy for Whiffles now seized the dressmakers. It was useless to attempt to hide the number of girls in the room. One of them drew aside the window hangings, revealing a balcony accessible from the open casement.

Out they scrambled, Whiffles hustling them in a panic of dread. He had just closed the window and drawn the hangs when the doorbell rang.

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well-Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair

Tells How He Did It.

A Western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman may mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barroo Compound and 1 oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It restores streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home." Adv.

KEEP YOUR CAR

Keep Your Car!

The White Company's Solution of the Annual Trading Problem

Too many cars sold today are built to be traded; to last but one or two years; of ordinary materials; of extreme design; and, therefore, quickly useless and out of style. The second-hand market is flooded with such cars, and their value is next to nothing.

There Are Practically No White Cars on the Second-Hand Market

The real merit of any make of car is best shown by its absence from the second-hand market.

Look through the classified lists of any newspaper. Note the scarcity of Whites in the column after column of cars advertised for sale. Think what this means.

The chassis of White Cars are built in the same factory, by the same men, of the same identical materials as White Trucks.

And the most essential points of motor truck superiority—the features which have given White the supremacy among all motor trucks, both in quantity and value of production—are durability and continued economy of operation.

The bodies of White Cars are proper in outline, dignified and conservative, and because never extreme, are always in style.

White bodies are built, like White chassies, to last for years, and are not designed to make the owner feel obliged, for mere appearance sake, to purchase a new car every year.

Extreme styles in motor cars are due more to the desire on the part of the manufacturer to force an immediate market rather than to sell cars which will give definite satisfaction for years to come.

So thoroughly does the public believe in the superior wearing qualities and continued economy of operation of White Cars, that every White Dealer has a waiting list for used White Cars which he cannot supply.

The White Company, as far as White Cars are concerned, has no second-hand problem.

And because the demand for used White Cars so far exceeds the supply, White Owners are continually importuned to trade their cars for other makes, because dealers know that used Whites can be sold immediately for the highest cash price.

But White Owners rarely trade. They know that their old Whites are better today, more economical to operate, and will be worth more next year and in years to come than the new cars offered in exchange.

Buy your car from a manufacturer who builds for keeps—not for trades.

THE MANUFACTURING AS WELL AS THE SALES POLICY OF THE WHITE COMPANY HAS ALWAYS OPPOSED FREQUENT TRADES

GIVE THAT PUNY CHILD THIS GUARANTEED REMEDY

If your child is under-weight, listless, ailing, liable to get sick easily, it needs a medicine to build its weight and strength. For this purpose there is nothing else we know of that can so strongly endorse as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. The remarkable success of this splendid medicine is due to the fact that it contains ingredients that tone the nerves, enrich the blood and furnish to the entire system the strength, weight and health-building substances it needs. And, it does all this without injuring the stomach. In fact, Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not only pleasant to take, but even the most sensitive stomach is benefited by it, and the digestion improved. On the other hand, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs, which most parents object to giving their children. It does its good work by taking hold of the weakness and builds the body up to its natural strength, at the same time making it strong to resist disease.

If Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion doesn't build your child up, feed the starved, puny muscles, and make the little one lively, strong, well and full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have, come back and tell us and get your money back. We don't want you to buy it now. We think this is no more than fair, and it leaves you no cause to hesitate. For old people also—for run-down—for all those nervous, tired-out, run-down, no matter what the cause—we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with the same guarantee of entire satisfaction or money back. Sold only at the Rexall Stores, $1.00. WALTER CAMP DISCUSSES
GOULD AND COVEY TENNIS
CONTEST OF NATIONS

WALTER CAMP'S COLUMN

J. Gould and G. F. Covey, the World's Professional Champion, in a Great International Court Tennis Contest—Some Hockey Comment.

By WALTER CAMP.

Written especially for the Boston American by the foremost sporting authority.

J. GOULD is really the great court tennis wonder of the world.

Perhaps some people think that the game that this man plays came simply from natural ability, and did not require any particular amount of work and training. As a matter of fact, there is no more polished piece of machinery turned out by the careful daily labor of one man after another than this human tennis machine.

Soon after his early polo days, he took up, under the direction of instructors secured by his father, the game of court tennis. Steady, consistent, faithful practice under the direction that started out with the one cardinal principle that governs at least two sports, namely tennis and golf, "keep your eye on the ball" being the right form, how to make a stroke; now it should be made to combine the greatest power and accuracy.

Many lawn tennis players will remember the revelation that the Dohertys were to American tennis players on the occasion of their first visit. The beauty of the stroke as followed through; the ease with which everything was done.

Now in court tennis, this young man has made himself so thoroughly proficient and such a master of the art that so far no one has been able to stand before him.

In most cases of a champion, we feel that there is a chance for almost any one coming up to defeat the former champion, but in this case the art and execution of Gould is so superior to that of any one else who has met him as to make the result a foregone conclusion.

* * *

COVEY WILL GET $1,250 IF HE WINS.

FOR this reason a special interest attaches to the fact that the world's professional title holder, G. F. Covey, who at present is the instructor employed by the Hon. Melville Stephen Lytton at his home in Sussex, England, is to be matched to play with Gould for a championship contest, for the best out of thirteen sets.

Covey is some thirty-three years of age, and learned his court tennis at the Princess Club under "Punch Fairs" who defeated him in 1910, 7 to 6, after an exciting match at Brighton. But the pupil was successful in 1912, when he defeated Fairs, 7 sets to 5. Covey is now about twenty-eight or twenty-nine.

The match will be played at the Racquet Club, Philadelphia, March 16, 18 and 21. The sum of $1,250 will go to Covey if he wins, or in the event of Gould's winning, a cup presented by the Racquet Club.

The match will be played each day, if necessary, but should a deciding set be required such set will be played immediately after the score has been called six-all. The balls will be Standard American, and the matches will begin at 12 o'clock noon. The match will be under an amateur referee.

In the event of illness of either competitor, on receipt of doctor's certificate, the referee may postpone the match not exceeding ten days. The gate money, after deducting one-third for the club, will go to Covey.

ST. PAUL'S GREAT HOCKEY PLAYERS.

IT is to the schools that we must look for material in all our varsity sports but in none more than hockey. St. Paul's School, N. H., turns out the best hockey players for the college ranks. Nearly every student there plays the game and their facilities are excellent.

This sport has grown in public interest with leaps and bounds and last year Harvard made it a major sport, for which the initial "H" is awarded.

There is one point in which the Canadian player has the advantage of us, and that is on the length of the Winter, and the fact that from boyhood he gets probably twice the amount of skating that our boys do.

Our rinks are helping this condition, but it is still the fact that the Canadian, by-and-large, is faster than the average American player. And it is a fast, rough game up there, especially in some of the professional and semi-professional contests.

* * *

HOCKEY "RATHER STRENUOUS!"

I was once coming through Michigan and met on the train a Canadian hockey player who had an injured shoulder. He had just witnessed one of our football games. He said to me:

"I like your game. I've played a bit in Canada. Rugby is the Canadian game, but I like yours better. They talk about it being rough; it's not as rough as our hockey when we really mean business.

"I got this shoulder in a game. Let me tell you what I had on. I had on a pair of hockey shoes with steel braces on the ankles, shin guards and greaves running up to my groin. Then I had on a solo leather cuirass running up to my arm pits, heavy gauntleted gloves, a nose piece and a head guard! For all that an opponent bodychecked me clean off the surface and banged my shoulder up like this!"

Rather strenuous!

One of the most interesting events of the season thus far was the opening of the new rink in New Haven—something which has been needed for a long time, and which will help college hockey greatly.

The next of Walter Camp's articles will appear in the Boston American, Thursday.

RED SOX STILL WAIT CONTRACT FROM SPEAKER

In spite of the statement given out today at Red Sox headquarters that Tris Speaker was just as good as signed for the 1914 season and that there is small chance in the world of the Federals getting him under contract, a certain air of anxiety and mystery seems to surround the whole thing.

Speaker had practically signed up before he went away, if reports at that time were true, and the same stand was taken when the early rumors regarding the Federals trailing the Red Sox star were first given out, but it was not until the AMERICAN called the attention to the fact that the outlaw league had scouts in Italy that the Red Sox management got busy with cabled terms.

President Lannin and Vice-President Taylor are both confident that Speaker will sign up, but neither explains why they are so anxious to have the signed papers in their possession soon.

"I understand the Boston club always treated Mr. Speaker well generally," said Mr. Lannin, "and in a talk he had with Mr. McAleer before leaving Boston last Fall Speaker practically came to terms with the Boston club.

"We have taken care of our players up to date when they gave us a chance to see them, and can be counted on to treat Mr. Speaker with all the consideration that any player can ask. I am not worrying, and have no doubt that Speaker will go South with the Red Sox after the big banquet in New York March 8."

No word has been received from Cheater to date, but a cablegram is expected soon from Jimmy Callahan of the Chicago White Sox, who is acting as agent for the Boston team. Secretary Nickerson of the Braves said that he had no direct information that President Gaffney would be in Boston tomorrow with Manager Stallings and Johnnie Evers. President Gaffney, however, with George Phillings president, said in New York the other day that he and Stallings would leave New York for Boston tomorrow morning, and that Johnnie Evers will go to Boston from Troy tomorrow.

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

COME ON, YOU SPRING.

The sport page reeks with baseball politics
And tells of magnates throwing mud and bricks,
Of legal suits and double-crossing stunts
Until the public hollers: "What Ass wits!"
But soon will gentle Spring be on the job,
And to the Sunny South the baseball mob
Will wend its way, and peoples will rave about
The new found youth who hits like Tyrus Cobb,
And even Charlie Murphy will be dumb—
A stunt which, by the way, is going some—
And we shall read in large and glaring type
"Joe Wood Comes Back" or "Heinie Sprains a Thumb."
O, gentle Spring, with all your sun and rain,
We yearn to see your tear-stained face again,
For then with athletes fill the sporting page
And baseball magnates raise their howls again.

P. S.—In the epic above we said "sunny South," whereas if we had said "rainy South" it would have hit nearer the bull's-eye.

Tommy Leach will be field captain of the Cubs. Charles W. Murphy will be manager. We presume that the chief duties of Hank O'Day will be to manage the bats.

As we understand it, Charlie Murphy has organized himself into a society for the Advancement of the Federal League.

There need be no fear that the Chicago Feds will not have their park ready on time. They could build a better park than Murphy's in three days.

Mr. G'Day is not to be blamed for stepping into Mr. Evers' job, in fact, he is more to be pitied than censured.

FEAR.

Consider the Federal wasp,
Consider the downtrodden champ,
The poor guy is scared
And his heart is perplexed,
For he wonders if Evers will jump.

Harvard Dropped by Amherst Tennis Men

AMHERST, Feb. 17.—The schedule of the Amherst College Tennis Association has been approved by the student council. The schedule is practically the same as last year except that Brown has been substituted for Harvard. The schedule is as follows:

May 6—Brown at Amherst.
May 8—Wesleyan at Middletown.
May 9—New York at Amherst.
May 14—Dartmouth at Hanover.
May 23—Trinity at Amherst.
May 25—Williams at Amherst.
June 6—Yale at Amherst.

Chicago Syndicate Tries to Buy Cubs

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—The committee appointed by the local syndicate which in relation to purchase of the baseball league club received an answer from President Murphy relating to the refusal to sell a part of the club, James A. Patch, Charles A. Stedebeck and William H. Wrigley, jr., who began the negotiations, addressed letters over the owners' attitude but did not give any hope.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I THINK it is too terrible for anything the suffering they are having over in them Balkans," said the Manicure Lady. "The paper yesterday said that there are hundreds of thousands literally starving to death. There has been so much war over there that the soldiers has destroyed all the crops and ate up all the live stock. So all the poor women and the old men and the children ain't got a thing to eat. Honest to goodness, George, I can't see where this wonderful world that we are all the time talking about is getting any better. Certainly it can't be getting much more civilized when they will stand for a war that will let hundreds of thousands, mostly women and children, literarily starve to death."

"You don't mean 'literarily,' you mean 'literally,'" interrupted the Head Barber. "You are all the time calling me down about my grammar, but you make mere mistakes than I do."

"George," declared the Manicure Lady, "sometimes I think that you have a heart like a stone and a brain like a shriveled up bean. Here I was, telling you about the terrible and heartrending things which is happening over in them Balkans, and there are you, not paying a particle of attention to the agony that is going on there, but correcting me instead about a word—and you wrong at that. Sometimes I get to thinking about your lack of all them finer feelings and swear that you and me will just pass the time of day hereafter, and then I get lonesome and realize that I have to talk to somebody or get foolish, so I talk to you."

"I didn't mean to interrupt you," said the Head Barber. "I guess you are right; conditions must be awful over there. I notice that good old Uncle Sam is right there to help out, too—and England, and the other civilized countries. That is why I say the world is better than it was in them dark ages. In them days, when there was famine and fever and war there wasn't any civilized nations to step in and help them out of their misery. They just died like rats. Now when there is anything awful like that comes up, it gets into the newspapers and the people that has anything to give is quick enough coming across."

"Yes, there is something in that," admitted the Manicure Lady. "I didn't used to know what the power of the press meant. I used to think that it meant how strong them big machines was to run off so many papers, but Wilfred explained to me that it meant the influence newspapers has in the world. The old gent had to come in then with his knock against the papers, because once when he was running for office I guess after some of the papers got after him pretty hard, and he ran second instead of first. That was his last dent in politics, but he has hated the papers ever since.

"Wilfred has some wild scheme fixed up to get a few boy scouts like him and start for the Balkans with money and provisions, but when he started out trying to collect the lettuce nobody would kick in with no dough. He tried to get all the merchants in the neighborhood interested, but none of them knew anything about the starvation in the Balkans, and only one of them even knew that there was a place by that name, and besides, none of them would trust Wilfred no more anyhow, after the way he got inco them.

"I guess them awful troubles is sent here, George, to make us realize that we ain't so high and mighty, and to make us contented with what we have. Gee, business is awful, ain't it?"

Mac's Proof.

Mac and Donald were having a great eighteen-hole golf match. They both drove off in first-rate style, but when it came to playing the next stroke Donald was unable to find his ball.

Now a lost ball meant a lost hole, and Mac came over to Donald and joined in the search.

After a quarter of an hour had been wasted, Mac suggested that they should give it up, to which Donald who did not intend to throw a hole away if he could help it, would not agree.

A few seconds later, however, he called out, "It's a' richt, Mack. Here it is."

"Donald, ye're no speaking the truth," retorted Mac.

"I'm no feelin', Mac'avish; see here for yersel'."

"Donald," said Mac, reprovingly, "I ken fine ye're feelin'. I've had ye're ball in my pocket for fifteen minutes."

Free Tomorrow.

A restaurant keeper in the North of England one day placed a daring announcement at his shop door.

Waiting until next day, a man went in and had dinner enough for two. As he was leaving without paying, the proprietor stopped him at the door and demanded payment.

The queer notice was still posted at the door, and the customer, pointing to it, asked what it meant.

"It means exactly what it says," replied the angry proprietor; "there is no charge for dinner tomorrow."

"Good!" said the customer. "My name is Morrow, so I am entitled to a free dinner."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

"I SEE," said Mrs. Lysander John Appleton, looking up from her newspaper, "that it is a growing custom to have every member of a family talk into a phonograph that the record may be used to comfort the family when that member Has Gone Up Yonder."

Lysander John grunted, which is a husband's way of making answer.

"It is a pretty custom," mused his wife. "Think what it would mean to us after you are gone to turn a crank and hear the sound of a voice that is stilled."

Lysander John's grunt this time was louder and more expressive of disgust.

"You have always been such a good husband and father; you have such a noble heart, such great intelligence; you——" a pause, while she leaned over and patted him fondly on the cheek, "are such a handsome man."

This time the grunt expressed neither disgust nor disapproval.

"Let me have a record made of your dear voice to comfort us when you are gone. Let me select something for you to say which will be characteristic of you as we, your loved ones, know you best."

There was no grunt this time; but a happy, child-like smile.

It might be a good idea, Lysander John admitted, with his wife's hand fondling him under the chin; he would send for a man to come up with a record-making machine next day, and in the meanwhile he would pick out something to say.

He picked up a volume of Tennyson. "No, not that," objected his wife.

"Ah, perhaps I will find a sentiment more like me in Byron, or Pope, or Shakespeare," he said, getting down their works from the library shelves. "Something noble, grand, heroic, tender; something that will sound just like me."

"It is not in any book," replied his wife, "that you will find the sentiment that will remind us of you most vividly. It is written here—on my heart."

Lysander John looked pleased. No doubt his wife was about to recall some beautiful sentiment that had originated in his massive brain, some gem he had sent forth, and then forgotten, just as the truly great will.

"What is it?" he asked.

"It is so like you," replied Mrs. Appleton, the tears coming to her eyes in anticipation of the time when her widowed heart would be thrilled by hearing her husband's voice again. "It is this, which you always say when you give me money:

"MAKE THAT GO AS FAR AS YOU CAN."

Hated Waste.

Snow was falling heavily outside the schoolhouse, and the young teacher improved the time by warning her class of the dangers of catching cold.

"Yes," she remarked, "you must be very careful indeed, now that the real cold weather has come. Last Winter my little brother went out with his sled and caught such a bad cold that he has never got properly well again."

"He has to live in the South and must never come back again in the Winter! Isn't that a terrible thing to happen?"

The pupils looked duly sympathetic—all save one, who eagerly demanded:

"Please, teacher, where's his sled?"

A German balloon landed at Perm, in Russia, recently, having traveled without a stop from Bitterfeld, a distance of 1,740 miles. This beats the world's record, held by M. Reid Aime, the French balloonist, whose longest flight was 1,491 miles. The balloon was altogether eighty-seven hours in the air.

Years ago in the Berlin Parliament, it used to be the custom to supply not only the members but the reporters in the gallery with brandy and water. Every member habituated by smoke with a glass of brandy without a stop from him, and when he had finished it a watchful attendant brought another.

The waiter was trying to look unconcerned, but at the same time keep an eye on the guest whom he had served with a portion of stewed prunes.

He had sampled that skewed stew, and was finding doubtful satisfaction in it. Its astonished proprietor, when the customer took his first spoonful, asked:

"You got no two more portions of fish cook?"

"Yes, sir! Certainly, sir!" replied the waiter, wondering whether, after all, he had put a mackerel in instead of a sardine. "And some more potatoes, sir?"

"Oh, no, no! I only want the stone to polish my boots."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were not as strong this afternoon as they had been earlier in the day, the tone becoming uncertain at mildday. Prices were then irregular and continued to rate Western Union, which had not declined much around the start, was one of the weak spots in the list by afternoon. New Haven was another. American Ice touched a new high for the present movement and General Motors was conspicuous for strength, it being predicted that it would earn $10,000,000 on common stock this year.

In Boston by afternoon losses included Boston & Maine 1¼, New Haven 1¼, Elevated ¾, United Fruit ¾, Calumet & Arizona ¾ and Boston Suffolk ¼. American Agricultural Chemical, Boston & Albany, Boston & Maine, Boston Elevated, Boston & Lowell, Boston & Providence, Boston & Worcester, Boston Suffolk, Calumet & Arizona, Calumet & Hecla, Centennial, Copper Range, Dominion Coal, Fitchburg preferred, Franklin, Greene Cananea, Isle Royale, Lake Copper, Mexican Central, Mexican Northern, Michigan Copper & Brass, Nipissing, North Butte, Old Colony, Old Dominion, Osceola, Pullman, Quincy, Shannon, Tamarack, Trinity, United Fruit, United Shoe Machinery common and preferred, U. S. Steel common and preferred, Utah Copper, Victoria, Western Union, Winona and Wolverine.

Among declines in New York were Western Union 1¼, American Agricultural Chemical 1¼, Southern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Baltimore & Ohio ¾, Reading ¾, Union Pacific ¾ and Chesapeake & Ohio ¾. Gains included Steel ¼, Amalgamated ¼, Canadian Pacific ¼ and Reading ¼. American Smelting and New York Central were unchanged.

BETTER TONE AT START.

There was a better tone to the New York market at the start, traders having been assured over night that the postponement of the railroad rate case decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission until September 15 did not necessarily mean that the decision would be refused. This was a gleam of comfort to bulls, but not much more.

President Wilson is said to be anxious to have Congress enact all the pending reform measures of which the administration approves before the end of June so that business interests may be relieved of uncertainty as to legislation. It is reported here that while the fact that "big business" is held back by its doubts. Railroads are also declared to be handicapped by uncertainty as to what the Interstate Commerce Commission is going to decide in the eastern rate plan. But commissioners propose to hear all the evidence for and against the proposed raise, and then to take their time in rendering a decision. This administration has given no such desire to expedite a decision as to rates as it has to set certain laws passed.

LESS SELLING PRESSURE.

The market opened stronger because there was less selling pressure. Offerings were so moderate in amount that the demand was found equal to the supply at steadied prices. Most leading issues showed small gains in early trading. American stocks had been irregular and heavy in London and fluctuations were as narrow abroad as here. The European view of heavy sellers of internationals yesterday did not seem reasonable.

Announcement that American Telephone had decided upon a plan to finance Western Union bonds and that the stock would be underwritten by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. didn't have much effect upon either issue. Traders said that the news had been discounted by their recent rise. It is reported that the stock will be offered to Western Union minority holders.

Business was of comparatively small volume during the morning and over noon time. It had few features of interest. General Motors continued to rise. By midday it was up at 65. New Haven was weak. There was a conference between read and Department of Justice officials at Washington today. Market transactions did not indicate that the public was taking a hand. Professionals said that it was "marking time," to use a military expression.

LOCAL MARKET WAS DULL.

The local market was dull with both New Haven and Boston & Maine weak. It is stated by the Boston News Bureau:

"In the near future there will be an organized movement on the part of Boston & Maine security stockholders to urge their interests through the formation of a protective committee. It is also likely that holders of leased line securities will also take concerted action in protection of their rights. So many security stockholders threatened had a few weeks ago proceeded to the courts that the movement may be the natural outcome."

TRAVELING IN YOUR LIBRARY

How to Satisfy That Longing Without Leaving Your Own Fireside.

Have you ever had a longing for travel? The person is rare who has not at some time earnestly yearned to break away from the routine and spend a few weeks or months in some coveted spot of India, Europe or Japan.

In your enthusiasm you probably called upon your bookseller and purchased one or more volumes of travel telling of the delights of the region you fancy. For a fairly good book of several hundred pages and perhaps fifty illustrations, you paid from $1 to $2, and have perhaps felt that the contents were worth it.

Have you ever had the desire to visit Panama, the narrowest strip of land on the western hemisphere? Just now it is the most talked about country in the world, the great canal has "put it on the map."

The book, "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose," is the most remarkable travel volume ever published. It contains more than 600 photographs and colored illustrations, sent to your order by booksellers and ask if he has any volume in any price which can compare with it in the greatness of its illustrations. If you did no more than review the hundreds of photographs in this remarkable book, you would acquire a comprehensive understanding of the Panama subject without reading a single line of the interesting text. The text, telling you everything about the canal, the people, their customs and history, is unrivalled for completeness, accuracy, and the interesting manner in which it is written.

In another column is a Panama certificate telling you how you can get this wonderful book on terms representing a nominal cash outlay which will astound you.

Among the recent motor truck sales reported by the White Company of Cleveland, are three to the Bell Telephone Company, Philadelphia, and three to the Southern Bell Telephone Company. Both these companies have operated trucks of many different makes. The former concern now runs twenty-four Whites, two of which are five-ton trucks built with double power and used for pulling cables through conduits. The three machines just purchased are one-ton open cab trucks for use in the construction department.

Don't Let a Cold Settle on Your Lungs

Many cases of lung Trouble can be traced directly to a neglected cold. It has been tried, tested and watch, as a result has effected the cures of not one, but a hundred people, and is now winning favor in Boston. Dr. Erdman's Alkavita is most beneficial in such cases and has been for the most part successful in the public many cases with bad serious lung troubles.

Pennsville, N. J.

"Gentlemen:—During the winter I took a cold, treated a severe cold, which settled in my lungs. I tried nearly every preparation without any relief, and finally concluded that Dr. Erdman's Alkavita was recommended to me and I commenced using it. I had only taken a few bottles when I seemed to gain no relief; in fact, I seemed to grow worse. I felt like giving up in despair, and found out for the first time how really serious my case was. I had been told that Dr. Erdman's Alkavita was a good medicine for some time, my mother using the medicine for some time my mother was then troubled with a bad cough and cold in the chest. I decided to try it, and in a short time I felt relieved. I continued using it and in a few weeks I was entirely cured. I am now in good health and can recommend Dr. Erdman's Alkavita to all who are troubled with a cough, cold or lung trouble. Yours truly, (Signed) GEO. M. BATES.

Dr. Erdman's Alkavita has been successful in many cases of bronchial affections for persons Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in fact in building the system. Obtain an Alkavita from a druggist or hotel-keeping druggist. Send to head-quarters for the Erdman Institute, 1211 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of remarkable cures and additional evidence.

FORBES TAKES UP RULING ON RAIL ADVANCES

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

Governmental bodies are given to dawdling. They seldom act with business-like dispatch. Before creating a multiplicity of new governmental commissions or piling an inordinate number of additional burdens on existing ones, might it not be well to demand a little less dilatoriness and procrastination by those already entrusted with important and pressing duties?

The Interstate Commerce Commission's suspension of the proposed 5 per cent increase in Eastern railroad freight rates from March 4 to September 15 brings up this subject of governmental interference to expedition in settling questions of extreme urgency.

The announcement caused securities to decline, and fears were immediately expressed that the incipient revival in business would be checked, since the railroads, it was argued, will refrain from placing orders for rails, rolling stock, etc.

* * *

Wall Street hastily interpreted the long postponement as presaging a refusing the commission's opposition to favorable action. Such a conclusion is not warranted.

* * *

The situation is this: When March 15 was named the expectation was that the whole evidence, pro and con, would be submitted in time to permit of a decision by that date. so much extra data were demanded by Mr. Marble, the commissioner who was offered by the railroads and so many delays were occasioned by hostile and friendly shippers, that the time limit imposed upon the commission—that the shippers had not adequate opportunity to present their case. A postponement of the period of deliberation, therefore, became necessary.

* * *

Perhaps the commission, in naming so distant a date as September 15, has been influenced also by a desire to give the railroads early benefit from lopping off free services to industrial companies owning "tap" lines.

* * *

I understand, however, that if the commission can reach a decision earlier, it will do so—that, indeed, it may act before the vacation period.

* * *

Moreover, the delay is not to be considered a refusal to grant, in part, favorable or unfavorable, in the commission's attitude.

* * *

Having thus explained the real position, may I not also call attention to the infinite importance of proceeding with all possible dispatch to arrive at and announce a decision?

* * *

I know, and the commissioners must know, that assurances have come from the very highest sources that the urgency of the matter was keenly realized, that every legal necessary delay would be avoided in formulating a decision, that assurances were added which conveyed the impression—or at least permitted the conclusion—that the railroads would receive the fullest consideration. To be blunt, high hopes were raised.

* * *

In no slight measure the recent improvement in financial and industrial sentiment was traced to the encouragement thus disseminated. An early and favorable rate decision was counted upon.

* * *

Railroads began to order rails, to place contracts for engines and cars and to bestir themselves in other directions. This stimulated the steel trade, infused life into railway equipment companies, fostered cheerfulness in the security markets and paved the way for raising muchneeded money for refunding and betterment purposes.

* * *

It will be a thousand pities if the Commission's action — announced, very unfortunately, without a lucid explanation of the reasons for it—undoes all that has been done to restart the wheels of industry. A clear-cut statement ought to be issued forthwith by the Commission to dispel the unmerited depression of this afternoon from yesterday's bald announcement.

* * *

The country is already suffering so much from unemployment that no responsible body, government or private, has any business to needlessly aggravate matters. If a delegation from Washington could be brought to New York to witness the daily and nightly scenes of idleness and distress perhaps more care would be exercised.

It is definitely known that catarrh can be cured by the simple process of inoculating the blood with antiseptic remedies that stop inflammatory conditions throughout the mucous linings of the entire system in the body. This is done with the famous Swift's Spec Specific, or as it is widely known, S. S. S. It is taken into the blood just as nature really as the most nourishing food. It spreads its influence over every organ in the body, through all the veins and arteries, to the most delicate mucous surfaces to exchange inflammatory acids and other irritating substances for new, rich, healthful blood. S. S. S. cleans out the poisons, loosens accumulations of mucus, and makes a direct to reach the seat of the trouble. It is the only blood remedy that is guaranteed purely vegetable, and a trial bottle will be sent free to any sufferer who writes for it. Swift Specific Co., 159 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga.

MACKAY JEERS U. S. OWNERSHIP OF TELEGRAPHS

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Clarence H. Mackay, president, in the annual report of the Mackay companies, declares that acquisition of the telegraph lines by the government to abolish competition is a proposition that hardly commends itself to the intelligence of Americans.

"The operation of government ownership of the telegraphs arises with the least regularity," says Mr. Mackay. "The United States Postmaster operates office now transmitters the messages, but he is in new form. It advocates the acquisition of telegraph lines in the United States by the United States government, and using them for telegraph as well as postal purposes in competition with the present two telegraph companies. Such a proposition will hardly commend itself to the intelligence and fairness of the American people. In the first place, it has been pointed out that it will require at least $2,000,000 to pay for the physical properties and the earning capacity of the telephone and telegraph lines, and that the government would have to pay a million in order to acquire their rights in the telegraph business on the railroads, the same as England had to do."

Mr. Mackay mentions that the "burden of such purchase would be still heavier because every municipality, State and the Government itself receives as an aggregate of about $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year in taxes which would be lost under government ownership. Mr. Mackay gives a table showing how the operation of the telegraph in Great Britain has resulted in a constant increase in operating expenses.

"We feel there is little danger of the government embarking on such an enterprise," says Mr. Mackay, "and as any event your interests would be safeguarded."

* * *

So excited to avoid doing or saying aught to make the situation worse.

* * *

It is all very well to have a Federal Industrial Relation Commission visit different cities and gathering scientific evidence of conditions. BUT IN THE MEANTIME STARVING MEN AND WOMEN AND CHILDREN MUST BE FED.

* * *

If our politicians would only ask themselves whether their mission is to help or to hurt business, to encourage the employment of men or discourage it, to restore confidence or stay it. Perhaps fewer able-bodied citizens would be under the humiliating necessity of begging for bread for themselves and their families.

* * *

To perform a heroic operation to insure health is one thing; to kill the patient is another. Some—but not all—of the operations Washington is performing and preparing to perform are praiseworthy; but if they kill the patient—business—how will it fare with the physician?

FILENE FAVORS EDUCATION TO RIGHT LABOR

"Education is the only panacea which can be successfully applied to the problem of capital and labor," declared Edward A. Filene, in a lecture on the unemployed from a capitalist's standpoint, at Temple Israel. He predicted the time when every laboring man will earn at least $5 a day. He added:

"A man untrained and uneducated is by chance thrown out of employment from the one trade that he knows. He is unable to go into any other work because of lack of experience, and inevitably gradually becomes habitual idleness, and that means poverty and distress.

"The most blame for the capitalist for being what he is. He works as hard at the beginning of his life, while some of his friends are playing, that he finally rises to a commanding place in business life. What he has made and saved is truly his own.

"Commercial industry has developed with tremendous success during the past fifty years, and capitalist of industry have risen high, while others have toiled on as laborers. True classes have been formed and are at odds, both suffering from the fight.

"High wages paid to laborers have no value unless the workmen are living a life of congenial surroundings and some recreation. Good living means good housing. Business leaders must recognize this, for we can only get success through our employes."

Dynamite Used by Woman in Planting

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 17.—Planting trees with dynamite is a rather unusual occupation for women, but nevertheless Mrs. J. M. Brust of Oakland, has chosen this work for herself for the next few weeks.

And now she may be seen every afternoon, after school closes, dressed in a blue working shirt, khaki skirt and rubber boots, planting dynamite in the ground and setting off the charges so that the soil may be nice and soft for the planting of trees.

Crippling Enterprise—Harassing Business Men

The Sherman Anti-Trust Law Was Intended to Improve Conditions, Not to Make Life More Expensive — Attorney-General McReynolds Has Refused to Prosecute the New Haven Railroad Directors for Past Crimes, but He Attacks Useful Combinations and Legitimate Co-operation of Others

The Democratic party realizes, let us hope, that all real statesmanship is CONSTRUCTIVE and tends to build up a nation in the big things and little things.

At present the government at Washington, following its action in compelling the separation of the telephone and telegraph companies, has begun a suit to compel the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific Railroads to separate and work absolutely apart.

It is necessary to talk plainly about the presumably well-meant efforts "to regulate business."

The Sherman law, and all law, is intended—by the people, at least—to protect the people, to preserve the rights of the weak, and to encourage all HONEST AND CONSTRUCTIVE WORK BY MEN OF ABILITY.

To compel separation of the telephone and telegraph lines was an interference with efficiency, an interference with public service, a stupid refusal to realize the fact that combinations of value to the public must be ENCOURAGED under public supervision.

The telephone and the telegraph wires naturally work together for economy and public service.

Their ultimate destiny is government ownership. The way for that ownership should be paved by the highest and most efficient development of telegraphs and telephones combined with great protection and regulation.

The combination of the two had caused very important reductions in charges and very great increase in public convenience—thanks to intelligent management willing to divide with the people the profits of combination and organization.

When the government ordered these naturally allied public services to separate, business combination was forbidden, public convenience was ignored, the foolish backward step was taken.

The telephone companies should have had the telegraph wires and served the public by taking the telegraph messages from the telephone.

The telegraph companies should serve the public and have immediate access to the citizen sending telegraph messages over telephone wires. Combination in management and ownership with proper protection through rate regulation was the solution.

But the government forbade, for the sake of a theory and false interpretation of the Sherman law, that which was beneficial to the public and injurious to no one.

The present attack on the working combination of the Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific system—for it is only one system—is in character the same as the unwise order regarding the telegraph and telephone lines.

The Southern Pacific and the Central Pacific are not two separate railroad systems.

They constitute a railroad scheme for serving the people of California and of the West. They are interlacing lines.

It is a great convenience for the merchant and the manufacturer to deal with them as a unit. For the United States government to attack the ninety-nine-year lease under which the Southern Pacific manages the Central Pacific is childish interference with big business in the good sense of the word.

With the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing rates for freight and for passengers, combinations in railroad ownership cannot be made an agency for extortion.

The government says: "So much a mile per ton, so much a mile per passenger."

The government should permit intelligent railroad men to form legitimate, money-saving, time-saving combinations that will permit them to give better service to the public and better returns to their stockholders while obeying the commerce commission demands as to the rates per ton mile and per passenger mile.

When these two railroads are compelled to give up the combination under which they work—beneficial for both and for the public—they are compelled to spend money uselessly, compelled to spend on unnecessary competition, energy, time and cash that might be divided between public service and private profit.

It will be necessary to spend money soliciting, canvassing, in multiplying freight agents and ticket offices—without promoting public convenience or lowering a single rate.

And the roads will be compelled to go back to the old system under which the brains of railroad men were used to fight each other instead of being used to increase business by improving the service.

Gentlemen calling themselves Democrats who believe that they can prove their devotion to the people simply by interfering with the legitimate plans of able men do not understand the people.

The American citizen knows that the railroads build up the country as the country builds up the railroads.

The farmer knows that if he once sold his corn at ten cents a bushel for fuel it was because he had no railroad to haul it.

The people do not intend that the railroads shall harass or exploit them or practice extortion—government power through the Interstate Commerce Commission takes care of that. Control of railroad rates and practices by the government is necessary and inevitable. But it is not to the public advantage that organizers and builders of railroads shall be harassed and hampered by politicians merely for political capital.

If the telegraph and telephone offices can be in the same building and use the same wires and save effort the public is the richer in the long run.

If railroad systems can be directed by the same mind, with the same agents, charging fair rates, free from harassing, costly methods of wasteful competition, and regulated by public power, is much the better for the people.

The Sherman act is intended to prevent combinations that interfere with the rights of the individual, combinations that practice extortion through monopoly, combinations that forbid others to engage in legitimate pursuits, combinations that restrain trade, not combinations that promote trade and increase public convenience.

The Sherman act was not intended, and the people of the United States do not intend, to limit the energies, the power, the profits, public and private, of legitimate, natural, economical combination free from monopolistic extortion.

The politicians who bid for public favor by attacking—merely for the sake of attacking—wisely-organized railroad, industrial, or other combinations, will be disappointed in the results.

"Avast! Heave ho, my hearties! All hands take your partners for the next dance. Those who wish to do so may also belay or ahoy!" No sooner had Admiral Julce of the peace ship "Piffle" uttered these sailor-like words than the ball began. Among those present were: J. Morningside Oops, De Puyster Shoestrings, Miss Edythe Van Der Giggle, Miss Kathryne Gumdrop, Montmorency Harcourt Pic, Miss Gladysse Goo, Miss Ethyl Ohmy and Miss Kittye Wishbone. It was some tango tea! Intermingled with the soft strains of the popular waltz song, "What Did You Do with That Dollar I Gave You?" the voices of the yodlers were heard tearing off the following lilt:

"Let dogs delight to bark und bite,
But gif to me der tango tea—
Und eferything like dot,
Der glide, der dip, der trot!"

Suddenly, without the slightest previous notice, a most terrible and blood-curdling howl was—

No Treaty Violated in Free Tolls Law

Mr. Hearst Shows Nation's Demand for the Rights of Our Coastwise Shipping in Panama Canal Is as Honorable as It Is Patriotic

By William Randolph Hearst

(In the London Daily Express, September 11, 1912.)

To the Editor of the Express:

"YOU ask me to discuss the Panama Canal question. It seems to me that from the American point of view the Panama Canal question has been sufficiently discussed and sufficiently decided.

"The attitude of the United States is quite clear, and the action of the United States has been quite definite and determinate. The action of the United States is based upon the facts as we see them and in accordance with a standard of honor quite as high—to put it moderately—as that which prevails in any foreign country.

"The assertion of the English press that the government of the United States has sacrificed its honor and violated a treaty simply because the United States did not construe the terms of the treaty in accordance with England's claims and convenience would be extremely offensive if it were not supremely ridiculous. Fortunately the people of the United States have both a sense of honor and a sense of humor.

VIOLATED NO TREATY

"As a matter of fact, the United States has not violated any treaty, and, as a matter of further fact, if the United States had violated a treaty, England is the last nation which would be in a position to criticise us for so doing. It should be remembered that England did not acquire the name of Perfidious Albion without having duly earned it.

"The Tibet situation is one example of England's violated treaties and repudiated guarantees. The Persian situation is another example. The Egyptian situation is another evidence of the suitableness of England's sobriquet. Kindly contrast the attitude of England in permanently occupying Egypt in violation of her pledges and the attitude of the United States in evacuating Cuba after we had won the Spanish war and liberated Cuba.

"Cuba had been a Spanish possession, and the United States might properly have claimed it as a spoil of that war, but the United States abandoned Cuba after it had restored order in the island, merely on the honorable obligation of an informal promise to do so.

"It seems to me that the people of the United States are controlled more by matters of sentiment and questions of abstract justice and honor than any other nation.

"The United States is a republic based on principles of equal rights and universal justice. We are the one nation which allows inconvenient ideas of honor and discommoding questions of abstract justice and fundamental right to intrude themselves into our international relations.

"Our ideas of honor, however, do not and should not mean that we must decide every debatable point in a treaty in favor of the opposing party to the treaty, or submit our case to the judgment of other interested parties, nearly all of whom have shown their lack of political conscience whenever treaty stipulations or moral questions interfered with their material interests.

OUR POSITION CLEAR

"The position of the United States in this Panama matter is clear enough, and its argument is conclusive enough. In the first place the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is not a perpetuation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. It is a substitution for the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty was negotiated with the intention of excluding certain provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and therefore the provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty which are not in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty are provisions that are not only not perpetuated, but are definitely rejected.

"In the second place, since the negotiation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the rights of the United States in the canal and the relation of the United States toward the canal have entirely changed. The United States has acquired by purchase the territory through which the canal passes, and the Canal Zone is now as much the property of the United States as the Capitol at Washington, which the British burned in 1814 as an evidence of their sensitive regard for all international conventionalities and proprieties.

A PATRIOTIC DUTY

"The United States is not willing to concede that a treaty applies with exactly the same force to a domestic possession of the United States as it might apply to an enterprise projected through foreign territory.

"In the one the United States has a sentimental interest and a patriotic duty; in the other the United States has only a financial interest and a general obligation.

"Yet, apart from all this, the United States has violated no provision of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. It has merely construed in its own interests certain dubious paragraphs which England would have preferred to have had construed in her interests.

"In this is involved not so much a question of honor as a question of precaution and patriotism. As far as a question of honor is involved, the United States is maintaining its accustomed high standard of honor, and is capable of further maintaining it."

The Drama Dance

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHY tire your eyes at problem plays or moving pictures shows,
When in a drama-dance you get a thrill with every pose?
The most complex of tragedies you gather at a glance,
With all their tense emotions, when they're pictured in a dance.
And so through glide and hop and slide you follow out the story

For instance, when the dancer steps upon the slippery stage
And makes three circles to the left, you know he's wild with rage.
When he performs a sudden dip and throws a somersault,
You plainly see he meditates a murderous assault.
He does a flipflop backwards, and you clearly understand
The victim of his horrid crime at last has come to hand.

The music now grows soft and low; he lightly trips along,
By which you see the victim's aunt once did the dancer wrong.
A swaying motion from the waist, svelte, undulating, slow,
Informs you that aforesaid wrong was done nine year ago.
A double whirl, a sidelong squirm, a leap of direful fury,
Betray this aunt once jilted him at Bowling Green, Missouri.

A backward gallop spells revenge; a clever forward stagger
Apprises you that he has found he's lost his trusty dagger.
A stealthy shuffle follows this, and in his feet you read
That he has picked a brickbat up with which to do the deed.
A rush denotes the brickbat's course; he sinks upon the floor.
The dance is done. Revenge is won. The victim is no more!

What a Man Demands of the Woman He Loves

She Must Be a Fool, a Sage, a Lover, a Prude, a Cook, a Lady, a Parlor Ornament and a Kitchen Utensil

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN demands:

That a girl shall be perfectly unsophisticated and as ignorant as a babe of all the evils in the world, YET be able to take care of herself amidst all of its perils.

That she shall be a gay little butterfly, YET possess a noble soul concealed under her frivolity.

That she shall babble idiocies, YET be capable of being a real companion to an intelligent man.

That she shall be a fluffy ruffles, whose clothes make other women rubber, YET care nothing for dress, especially after she gets married.

That her hands shall always be nice and pink, and white, and soft, and squeezable, YET that she shall be handy with the cook stove and the dish washing.

That she shall fall in love with him at first sight, YET not be too easily won, and give him a run for his money before she finally accepts him.

That she shall be fire to him, YET ice and snow to all the balance of the world.

A man demands of his wife:

That she shall be perfectly devoted to him, BUT that she shall never make her love a burden to him.

That she shall live only in his presence, BUT that she shall not resent his absence.

That she will be a clinging vine, BUT that she will only festoon herself about him at such times and seasons as it is agreeable for him to act the part of the noble oak.

That she will be a good yoke mate, and pull her half of the domestic load, BUT that while so doing she will present the appearance of a gay little society butterfly.

That she will be an intelligent human being, BUT always defer to his opinion, and accept his point of view on every object.

That she will be of a true and loyal nature, BUT perfectly willing to give up even the mother who bore her if he doesn't happen to fancy his mother-in-law.

That she will be a model of all the cardinal virtues, BUT possess enough devilry to always keep a man interested, and guessing.

That she will listen with rapt interest to anything he chooses to tell her about his affairs, BUT that she will never have curiosity enough to ask him any questions.

That she will be as well dressed as other men's wives, BUT spend no money on clothes.

That she will set a good table, BUT run up no grocery or butcher's bills.

That she will be a good cook, BUT never smell of the kitchen.

That she shall have enough sense of humor to laugh when he makes fun of her peculiarities, BUT not enough to perceive his eccentricities.

In a word, men demand that woman should be a fool, a sage, a lover, a prude, a fashion plate, an economist, a cook, a lady, a parlor ornament and a kitchen utensil. That is the reason so few men are satisfied with their wives.

How Dante Knew That the Earth Was Round

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"HOW did Dante in the twelfth century know that the earth is round, and that the centre of gravity is at the earth's centre, when these facts were not established until some centuries later?"

A.—This is an important question. The ancient hierophants that ministered in the labyrinths and temples throughout antiquity certainly knew of the sphericity of the earth. This knowledge seems to have been forgotten until Copernicus. But surely some wise ones knew it during these obscure centuries.

Dante must have known it, but he did not know of the law of gravitation, for at that time no mathematics high enough to grasp this problem had been discovered. The great poet saw bodies fall, and thought of the centre of the globe, but he could not have been aware of the mighty law that Newton the Master discovered and proved.

But poets in all ages have spoken of truths that they sensed intuitively. This fact is an obscure problem in mentonomy.

Q.—"IS the principle of the gyroscope's stability known?"

A.—Yes, to the highest mathematicians only. They have completely solved every question, and they are formidable and complex in the extreme. All mechanics of the intricate gyroscope are known to the always immortal fifty able to add knowledge.

Letter Writing

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

IN the haste and confusion of present-day existence we are inclined sometimes of the considerate and courteous things which go so far toward making the charm of life. The many inventions for saving time and trouble are largely responsible for the neglect of the art of letter writing. The telephone or telegram cannot be substituted for letters or notes without an absolute loss in the best standards of courtesy. Correspondence is an indispensable accomplishment and no excuse can be made reasonably for avoiding it.

Unless a letter is in earnest it is dull and lifeless. The best letter writers of the world have cared for what they were doing and have cared for the friends to whom they were writing.

To win and hold friends, to keep the bonds of affection strong between families widely separated, nothing is more essential than letter writing.

Letters are indicative of character, education and manners. The writer's own self-respect is shown in the care and trouble taken to make a letter as perfect as may be.

Without doubt it is an accomplishment to be able to say the right thing and to say it in well-chosen words, just as it is an art to talk well, but nothing can be done without thought and practice. Thoughts must be collected, ideas arranged, if one would write well. A friendly letter should be colloquial, full of pleasant talk and news.

If something important is to be said, it is advisable to begin with the subject matter and to avoid unnecessary circumlocution and beat toward the point.

A dignified tone shows more self-respect than an assumption of familiarity. A letter written in clear, legible handwriting, dated, signed and addressed properly, is sure to make a good impression on the recipient.

The man in the moon is the favorite in the $100,000 race around the world.

"Let the unfit die," says Sir William Ramsay. But we doubt if he will undertake to pick out the unfit.

Sunbury, Pa., bans the tango and gambling, the turkey trot and slot machines. The dances have fallen in evil association.

Compared to the number of revolutions just now between the Rio Grande and Terra del Fuego, a spinning pin-wheel looks like a driven rivet.

The rich man is further diminishing his slim chances of getting to Heaven by the language he uses while he is trying to figure out how much income tax he owes.

Why doesn't The Hague Peace conference make a deal with the movies?

Noted tenor declared in court that many women are in love with him. Funny how some of these tenors hate themselves.

Army surgeon visiting China is struck by the number of bald-headed women. Over here it's only the wigmaker who notices this phenomenon.

Talk about stormy petrels—wherever there's trouble you'll find those Mother Carey's chickens, the United States marines.

Secretary Wilson's proposed height standard for immigrants would be a bit of a barrier for potential Harrimans or Carnegies.

Why not pay British merchant vessels a few hundred dollars a ton for all the freight they carry through the Panama Canal?
